

WESTERN UNION TAX DECISION IN GEORGIA DEEMED IMPORTANT

District Attorney French Considers It of Far-Reaching Effect in Limiting State Taxation Powers.

WIDE SCOPE OF ACT

Company's Attorney Says the Opinion Exempts Such Corporations From State Levy on Franchise.

An opinion handed down in the United States court of appeals, in the case of the Western Union Company vs. W. H. Wright, comptroller of the state of Georgia, was declared today by District Attorney Asa P. French an important and far-reaching decision, both in application to the case determined and in principle.

The Western Union Telegraph Company was held not liable for taxes on a federal franchise valuation of $950,000. In the opinion which reversed the lower court it was held that as the company had already been taxed on a valuation of $756,000 by the state on its property, a further tax on the $950,000 federal franchise was excessive, particularly in view of the fact that the profit made by the company in the state in 1908 was only a little in excess of $1000.

Col. Josiah H. Benton of Benton, Clarke & Beal, attorneys, who is an expert on law regarding telegraph companies, did not consider the decision of any particular significance. He said that courts all over the country are having just such questions as this under consideration. "The Western Union Telegraph Company seemed to be considered fair game in many places," he said. "The company was treated fairly in Boston and Massachusetts, but in the southern and western states legislative raids were frequent for the reason that their people did not have an ownership interest. The United States courts were full of cases holding that state laws in regard to telegraph companies were invalid. The local decision was generally upset by the United States courts."

Colonel Benton considered the present decision in Georgia a fair one. "The state," he said, "had a perfect right to tax property, but not the interstate business of telegraph companies. In such questions Congress has the power to make regulations, otherwise a state might prevent communication between other states. If the state authority were supreme, Connecticut, for instance, could prevent messages being sent between Boston and New York."

"I should not care to give an opinion upon the question of just what the effects of this decision will be, based only upon the meager newspaper accounts that I have so far seen," said District Attorney French. "I cannot see that this decision will have any bearing on the statute relative to the excise tax on corporations, joint stock companies, associations and insurance companies enacted Aug. 5, 1909, and at present pending for construction by the supreme court. The decision, I believe, will be of far-reaching effect."

Internal Revenue Collector James D. Gill was also of the opinion that the decision in Georgia would have no application to the corporation tax law of 1900. This law, he said, is concerned with the net profits of the companies, and would have nothing to do with any federal franchise. Collector Gill thought that all companies similar to the Western Union would be affected by this decision.

Attorney Albert Howell, who represented the Western Union Telegraph Company in the federal court in Georgia, said, after the decision was announced, that the case was of more than local importance. He continued:

"By this decision every telegraph company in the United States which accepted the post roads tax act of 1866 is exempt from state taxation on its franchise. This means that states which have passed franchise tax laws will be prohibited from collecting such taxes from the telegraph companies."

The post roads act was an act to aid in the construction of telegraph lines and reserve priority to the government in the use of the same for postal, military and other purposes. The act gives the telegraph companies the right to construct their lines over and along military and post roads of the United States, with certain restrictions, and requires that the telegraph communications between the several departments of the government of the United States shall have priority over all other business, and rates are to be fixed annually by the postmaster-general.

FOREST FIRE NEAR WEYMOUTH.

WEYMOUTH, Mass.—The forest fires which broke out near Middle and West streets here Monday afternoon, and which continued to burn all night, are under control today as a result of the efficient work of the local fire department, aided by volunteer citizens. A third fire broke out in the woods off Broadstreet at about 9 o'clock Monday night and is being fought by a large number of volunteer firemen.

KHEDIVE AND GRECIAN KING MAY RESIGN THEIR THRONES

GEORGE, KING OF THE HELLENES. Man who has guided the Grecian people since 1863 now said to be on verge of resigning his throne.

ABBAS HILMI PASHA, KHEDIVE. Titular ruler of Egypt whose problems are complicated as result of speech by former President.

Abbas Pasha, Khedive of Egypt, Has Been Much Perplexed by Mr. Roosevelt's Pro-English Speeches

RULER TELLS PLAN

(By the United Press.) CONSTANTINOPLE.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt is responsible for the determination of Abbas Pasha, Khedive of Egypt, to resign his throne, according to a report current here today.

By his speeches in Khartoum and Cairo, in which he pleaded for the strengthening of English rule in Egypt, and urged the Egyptians to submit peacefully to such rule, Mr. Roosevelt is declared to have stirred up such activity on the part of the Young Turks, who constitute the Nationalist party, that the Khedive has found his continued rule beset by too many perplexities and has decided to abdicate.

The American's speeches brought the issue of Egyptian freedom plainly to the front and has had the reverse effect from that intended by Mr. Roosevelt.

King George May Abdicate

VIENNA.—King George of Greece is again on the verge of abdicating his throne, according to an interview with him appearing in today's Neue Freie Presse.

He was elected King of the Hellenes by the national assembly at Athens in 1863.

DEFERS DECISION ON RIVER CHANNEL

Col. Frederic V. Abbot, local army engineer, has returned to Boston from Kansas City where he was president of a board of army engineers to consider a plan to give the Missouri river a bigger channel from Kansas City to St. Louis. The proceedings were not complete and an adjournment was taken until Nov. 7.

The board found that about 45 miles of the river has a good channel, but when this improvement was made no provisions were made for about 200 miles of the river above this point. It is this question that is now being considered and has caused a delay. In all about 400 miles of water is to be improved at a cost of $1,000,000.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANK LAW OBJECT OF OFFICIAL'S ATTACK

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—An attack upon the postal savings law featured the opening session of the thirty-sixth annual convention of the American Bankers Association, which convened here today.

The attack was made by President Lewis F. Pierson, in reply to the addresses of welcome delivered by George Alexander, mayor of Los Angeles, and W. H. Holliday, president of the Los Angeles clearing house.

Mr. Pierson declared reports had reached him that there is being exerted political pressure to use the newly created bank for individual benefit, "repugnant to all principles of good government."

President Pierson urged a uniform system of bank accounting as the best aid to the state and national bank examiners. He also urged that some system be devised whereby the true value of commercial paper might be learned by banks before purchasing it in the market.

In the matter of currency reforms, Mr. Pierson favored the European custom, preventing the control of banks from passing into the hands of a few, by giving each stockholder but one vote, no matter how much stock he had. This, he thought, would prevent political or speculative control of banks, would insure better management and would keep undesirable men out of official positions in banks. He urged many technical changes in the matter of reserve, rediscounting of currency issues and demanded of Congress a proper revision of the banking and currency system.

"In every other nation of the world," he said, "a banking and monetary system, leading up to an institution of discount and currency issue has demonstrated its beneficial influences in keeping business conditions steady and stable by conservatively controlling the expansion of credit through its rate of discount and automatically increasing and decreasing the volume of note issues with the requirements of the trade."

SALEM HIGH SCHOOL INQUIRY.

At a meeting of the Salem school committee last night, Mayor Howard introduced an order authorizing him to appoint a committee of three to investigate the high school. The mayor said he had received numerous complaints.

MR. BRYAN TO OPPOSE SPEAKER.

DANVILLE, Ill.—It was announced here today that William J. Bryan would devote two days to stumping this Congress district against Speaker Cannon. He will come into the district at Kankakee on Oct. 20.

EXCEEDS 4,000 MARK IN MEMBERSHIP OF COMMERCE CHAMBER

Chairman Hall Announces a Vigorous Campaign to Gain 4500 by Jan. 1, 1911, and Asks Hearty Aid.

WORK IS DESCRIBED

Organization Is Claimed as Powerful Benefactor for All New England, Thus Meriting Wide Support.

Membership in the Boston Chamber of Commerce today is past the 4000 mark as the result of vigorous work by the membership committee in bringing before the public the aims and accomplishments of that body.

This means more than 500 new members since last January, and the committee is now planning an active, aggressive campaign to bring the total up to 4500 by the first of next year.

"There are a great many men who live in suburban towns who have felt that the Chamber of Commerce is for citizens of Boston only," said Chairman Edward K. Hall of the membership committee today. As a matter of fact, the man that lives in the suburbs and who comes into the city to do business is the man of all men who should belong to the Chamber, whether he is a business or professional man.

"He makes his money in Boston and takes it out to the suburbs to have it taxed, and he casts his vote in the suburbs, thus depriving the city in which he earns his living both of his citizenship and of his property."

"The least such a man can do, if he has any public spirit, is to join the chamber, and thus give his support to an organization whose entire resources are devoted to the advancement of all New England."

E. C. Johnson of the membership committee, in an interview with a Monitor reporter today, said that the figures quoted in the opening paragraph make the organization the largest of its kind in the country, if not in the world.

"Although the slogan of the membership committee is '4500 for 1911,' their plans do not stop there," says Mr. Johnson. "The ideal of the chamber is to have several thousand members, not only in Boston, but throughout New England; not business men alone, but every clean, live, honest man interested in the welfare of New England."

"Membership dues are only $25 per year, this very moderate sum being fixed upon to secure greater individual interest and attention to the needs and work of the chamber."

TREASURY OFFICIAL HERE TO VIEW SUGAR WEIGHING APPARATUS

Assistant Secretary James F. Curtis of Boston of the United States treasury department is in the city today for the purpose of inspecting a new and improved device for use in weighing sugar and other materials.

Mr. Curtis visited the American Sugar Refinery plant in South Boston accompanied by Collector of Customs Edwin U. Curtis and Post Surveyor J. J. McCarthy. This new device, when put into operation will mean a saving of nearly 50 per cent to the government, in the expense of weighing imports delivered to the local sugar refineries, according to Surveyor McCarthy.

The government expense for weighing is from $60,000 to $80,000 a year for Boston alone, and it is estimated that the saving to the treasury department will amount to about $35,000 a year when the new device is in operation. It is at present being used in New York with great success.

FAIL TO APPEAR AGAINST 'L' ROAD

No one appeared before the railroad board today to support the position of Joseph A. O'Bryan for better service on the Boston Elevated between South Boston and Fields and Uphams Corners and to Atlantic avenue.

Vice President Sergeant of the Elevated Company was present to explain the service now given in this section, but as the petitioner failed to appear, the board decided to place the matter on file pending the receipt of further advice from the petitioner as to whether he desires to press the matter.

QUINCY DEFICIENCIES TOOK PLACE IN PAST, REPORTS THE MAYOR

QUINCY, Mass.—"Shortage in the financial accounts of the city could not occur under the methods of bookkeeping now in use," said Mayor William T. Shea today.

He was commenting on the report of the special committee appointed by the council to investigate the financial condition of the city, which reported a deficiency of $92,051 in the city funds.

The mayor pointed out that the shortage was the result of the bookkeeping methods in vogue before he took office in 1908, for at that time modern systems were introduced.

It is the opinion of many citizens that the investigation and the use that has been made of the developments are the result of a political attempt to cast discredit upon the present administration.

The committee was composed of President Hobbs and Councilmen Newland, Gardner, Branch and Boyd. The report was as follows:

"After consultation with the heads of various departments we have found the following deficiencies:

Assessors' department.....	$33,853
Tax collectors' department.....	8,435
Sever department.....	31,763
Money appropriated from year to year by the city council and charged to unexpended balances and unappropriated receipts.....	18,000
Total.....	$92,051

"And we recommend that these deficiencies be taken care of, so that they will not continue to be a permanent burden."

"We find that there are several parcels of real estate being taxed to the city, having been bid in by the city for unpaid taxes, and we recommend that the titles be registered in the name of the city and the property sold, as we are now deprived of the income which might be derived from them in the way of taxes."

"We would recommend that the books of the collector of taxes be balanced and closed up to Jan. 1, 1907, and that each year the books of the collector be so balanced and closed to the first day of January, three years previous."

"These deficiencies are not the result of dishonesty, but of the usual methods of city financing in vogue not only in this city, but many others, and under the auditing system we created in 1907 these deficiencies cannot in the future occur."

D. A. R. RECEPTION FOR MRS. SCOTT

A reception and banquet will be given in honor of Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, at the Vendome Thursday, Oct. 20. The reception will be from 5 to 7, followed by the banquet at 8 o'clock.

This is Mrs. Scott's first official visit to Massachusetts since her election as president of the national organization a year ago.

A report of progress in patriotic work in the nearly 80 chapters represented in the Massachusetts D. A. R. will be given at the state conference to be held in Kings chapel Oct. 21.

FOREST FIRE UNDER CONTROL.

WHITMAN.—Reports from the forest fire in this town, Abington and Rockland show that the fire is now pretty well under control. The firemen fought the fire until late last night. Several residences were saved by the firemen during the day.

GAUNTLET TO STATE DEMOCRATIC BODY IS THROWN BY HAMLIN

Candidate for the Gubernatorial Nomination Issues a Signed Statement of Condemnation Today.

OPPOSES DICTATION

Many Conventions Are Scheduled Today for County and District Nominations for Elective Offices.

Charles S. Hamlin, "one of the three Democratic candidates for the nomination for Governor, in a signed statement made public today throws down the gauntlet of battle to the Democratic state organization, which Mr. Hamlin declares is lacking the candidacy of Eugene N. Foss for the gubernatorial nomination, despite the wishes of the Democrats of Massachusetts at large to have their nominee chosen without interference on the part of the state leaders."

Mr. Hamlin's statement is in reply to the letter of Chairman Frederick J. MacLeod of the Democratic state committee made public recently, in which the latter declared that Mr. Foss is the logical candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor this year.

"I have read the statement of the chairman of the Democratic state committee as to the nomination for the office of Governor. This was given out with the purpose of relieving the Democrats of Massachusetts from the trouble of choosing the candidate. It was also announced in the press that the chairman had reluctantly abandoned the plan of having the convention name a candidate for United States senator."

"I regret very much that it could not have been announced at the same time just who had been decided upon

VALUABLE COTTON CARGO CAPSIZED IN BOSTON HARBOR

Four hundred bales of cotton, valued at about $35,000, went into the water of Boston harbor shortly after noon today.

The mishap was caused by waves, made by an East Boston ferry boat, striking the lighter Hickory broadside on, while the lighter was in tow of the tug Juno bound from the steamship City of Memphis to Mystic wharf, Charlestown. At the latter place the cotton was to have been loaded into cars and sent to the mills in Lowell and Lawrence.

The tugs Pallas, Blanche, Marie, Juno, Betsy Ross and William Sprague Orion went to the assistance of the lighter and quickly pushed the bales into the basin at Rowes wharf, where they were hauled back on board the lighter.

The bales, which weigh 550 pounds each, were being swiftly carried by the tide toward East Boston and the harbor entrance, when the timely assistance of the tugs succeeded in saving all of them. They were said to have been only slightly injured by the water. The sight presented by the floating cotton was certainly novel.

MISSION BOARD'S SECRETARY REVIEWS TURKISH SITUATION

DR. G. STANLEY HALL. President of Clark University who welcomes conference on near east and Africa to Worcester.

WORCESTER, Mass.—President G. Stanley Hall opened a four days' conference on the near east and Africa at Clark University, Worcester, this morning with an address of welcome. The opening general address of the conference was made by the Rev. Dr. James L. Barton, foreign secretary of the American Board of Missions, Boston, for many years a resident in Turkey. His subject was: "A Survey of the Turkish Situation."

Dr. Barton said in part: "The territory dominated by Turkey is in many respects the most strategic section of European western Asia. Any first class power occupying Constantinople as its capital, with a competent army and navy, could dominate not only the regions bordering upon the Mediterranean, but the shorter water route to the farther east as well as the entire Black sea and Persia."

"The importance of the territory held by Turkey with reference to the political life of Europe and Asia is a guarantee for the maintenance of Turkey as an independent power."

"The new regime is making an honest endeavor to put upon a permanent basis its newly adopted constitutional government. The present government and in fact the entire regime is dependent upon the loyalty of the army. The new order was established by the troops and is now sustained by them."

"It is evident that the present Turkish situation is a most interesting one."

TURKEY'S FIRST BIG INTERNATIONAL FAIR TO BE HELD IN 1913

(Special to The Monitor.)
CONSTANTINOPLE—A "Permis Ex-clusif" has been granted for the holding in 1913, of what will constitute the first international exhibition ever held in Turkey. The necessary authority has been granted to Taranto Bey of Constantinople, and D. Lewis-Poole of London.
The scheme is obtaining wide-spread support and approval not only in Constantinople, but in the capitals of Europe.

An important item in connection with the organization of the exhibition is the granting of the site free of cost. Constantinople forms what may be termed a junction between the east and west, and forms also an ideal place for the holding of such an exhibition which will it is confidently expected, be a very great success. Delegates from London have already left for Constantinople to assist in selecting the site which has not yet been chosen.

ANOTHER FLIGHT OVER PYRENEES

SAN SEBASTIAN—Another flight over the Pyrenees was made today by Maurice Tabuteau, who ascended here at 5:10 a. m. and flew without interruption to Biarritz, landing in the public square.

Last Friday M. Tabuteau flew from Biarritz to this city. In today's flight he maintained an average height of 2500 feet. M. Tabuteau has an "aeroplane shop" in Biarritz and makes his living by taking passengers on short flights.

SPANISH PREMIER PLEASED.

MADRID—In an interview, Premier Canalejas characterized Sunday's maniicalism, as, with few exceptions, he said, they had not fulfilled the expectations of the organizers.

RADIUM SLIGHTLY CHEAPER.

LONDON—Sir William Ramsay in a lecture Monday stated that radium now costs $2,100,000 per ounce, slightly less than its value a year ago, when it was $2,500,000 an ounce, or $90 per milli-gram.

REGENT OF CHINESE EMPIRE ADDRESSES SESSION OF SENATE

PEKING—The newly constituted imperial Senate was opened Monday by the regent, Prince Chun, who in a brief address stated that the wish of the people was for a parliamentary government.

The imperial Senate constitutes the second stage in the development of a popular representative government. The first was the inauguration, a year ago, of the provincial assemblies. The crowning event will be the establishment of a general parliament, which is promised for 1915.

Of the 200 members, 100 were appointed by the throne, while the others, though chosen by the provincial assemblies, were not admitted until their selection had been approved by the viceroys of their province. Those named by the throne included imperial Manchurian princes and nobles, distinguished scholars, representatives of the social class and of the high tax payers.

Japanese Count Advises Chinese to Move Slowly

TOKIO—"Should any one attempt to press the Chinese government hereafter for immediate opening of Parliament, the authorities here should deal with them vigorously," declared Count Okuma, the former Japanese premier. Count Okuma referred to the Chinese prince regent's recent refusal to grant a parliament as prayed for last summer.

"Thirty-nine years ago," according to the count, "a decree was issued in Japan promising the nation to open a Diet after nine years. Yet over 20 years were spent for various arrangements before Parliament was opened. In China the central government is singularly weak, owing to the constant friction between Chinese and Manchus concerning the Manchur government, imperfection of communication and difference of dialects, and it is best for China to develop the provincial assemblies, cultivate political ideas among the nation and gradually move toward the desired goal."

ENGLISH COTTON PEACE HELD OFF

MANCHESTER—The Federation of Master Cotton Spinners refused Monday to entertain the revised terms of a compromise proposition offered by George Ranken Askwith, controller general of the commercial, labor and statistical department of the Board of Trade, and accepted by the operatives. Accordingly the lockout of 130,000 men continues.

The employers submitted a counter proposal which the operatives rejected Monday evening.

BERLIN—Negotiations to prevent a lockout of the metal workers have up to the present failed. Both masters and workmen at meetings in Hamburg Monday declared their determination not to withdraw from their respective positions.
Nearly 100,000 men are affected in Berlin alone, while it is estimated that at least 500,000 throughout Germany will be turned out on Oct. 8.

AEROPLANE OVER ST. PETERSBURG

ST. PETERSBURG—The first aero-plane flight over St. Petersburg was made by Lieutenant Rudnief in a Farman machine. Starting from the aviation ground in the suburb of Novaya Dvornaya, the aviator followed the course of the River Neva, twice circled about the spire of St. Isaac's cathedral and, in returning, passed over an island in the Finnish gulf.

Lieutenant Rudnief is one of the group of officers in the engineering corps who are participating in the aviation meet organized by Boris, a son of Editor Suvorin. M. Guchkoff, with Colonel Ulianov for a passenger, flew for 10 minutes. Lieutenant Matievich established a Russian altitude record of 3937 feet, using a Bleriot machine.

BALLOON DROPS WITH FOUR.

LONDON—Owing to a valve jamming a balloon in which there were three men and a French actress named Denander dropped 7000 feet, landing near Roydon, Essex. All were injured.

Reopening British Section of Brussels Exhibition

King of the Belgians performed opening ceremony.

(Special Correspondence of The Monitor.)
BRUSSELS—The reopening of the British section of the Brussels exhibition took place on Sept. 19, exactly five weeks after its destruction. It will be remembered that only four days after the fire a notice was issued that it would be reconstructed, though the organizers themselves scarcely believed it possible that they would be able to fulfill the decision they had taken. Within a few hours of their announcement abundant offers of support were forthcoming, the generous cooperation of the British treasury and the steamships plying between the British and Belgian ports, and the energy and resources of the British and Belgian firms working together in mutual sympathy fully proving the wisdom of the decision that had been taken.

The King of the Belgians performed the opening ceremony at half past ten, driving to the exhibition through dense crowds in a carriage drawn by four horses. Here he was received by the British minister, Sir Arthur Hardinge, Lord Lytton, president of the British royal commission, and many foreign ministers. The King made a most kindly and sympathetic speech, saying how deeply he appreciated the splendid work that had been done, and concluded with these words: "It is with joy that I declare the new British section open." His majesty then made a long tour of inspection, and as he departed appeared to be greatly pleased at the enthusiastic British cheers which greeted him as he passed down the lines of English workmen who had labored so heartily to insure the speedy completion of their country's section.

During the afternoon the courts were densely crowded, and as an indication that the interest and sympathy of the visitors took a practical turn it may be mentioned that one firm alone sold £400 worth of goods in a little over three hours.

Among the interesting new exhibits will be found a room whose ceiling is a replica of the ceiling in the Yorkshire house in which Guy Fawkes lived, and which he sold in order to obtain money for his plot. The furniture includes some oak chairs which belonged to Charles the First, and many pieces of ancient and historical furniture.

LARGE INCREASE IN ATTENDANCE AT EVENING SCHOOLS

(Special to The Monitor.)
LONDON—The whole of the evening institutions controlled by the London county council's educational committee are now open for the enrollment of students for the winter session. The number of children leaving day schools and other young people who avail themselves of the various evening schools and classes organized for them is increasing yearly, and shows that many are anxious to continue their education even where attendance is voluntary.

The idea of the benefit to the community which can be derived from this course of instruction was aptly described by Mr. R. Blair in a paper which he read before the recent meeting of the British Association. "Catch the boy," said he, "as soon as he leaves the elementary school, and induce him to attend evening classes; add to that the training of the workshop or the business house and you have the fairly common plan of training those who will rise

SULTAN BUYS 20 AEROPLANES.

PARIS—An Englishman named Wilkinson, representing the Sultan of Morocco, has been in Paris buying aeroplanes for the Sultan, who expects to use them for mail transportation between Fez and Tangier. The Sultan or-

EXPECT TO HAVE IMPERIAL EXHIBIT IN LONDON IN 1915

(Special to The Monitor.)
LONDON—In view of the great success that has attended the great majority of exhibitions in this country wherein foreign countries have been represented, it is anticipated that the imperial exhibition which it is proposed to hold in London within the next few years will be equally, if not more, successful. While the actual date has not yet been definitely fixed, it is expected that 1915 will be the year in which the exhibition will take place. One of the main reasons for selecting that date is the fact that the next colonial conference will take place then, and also the fact that the Prince of Wales will come of age that year, celebrating his twenty-first birthday on June 23, 1915, is one of the reasons why that year has been provisionally selected.

Sir Pieter Stewart Bann, chairman of the general executive council of the South African National Union, first conceived the idea, and it is hoped that the officials in all quarters of the empire will rise to the occasion and do their utmost to supply a good and representative exhibit of the part of the empire in which they are particularly interested.

No effort will be spared to make the exhibition a success, and arrangements will be made for persons well acquainted with the requirements to visit various parts of the overseas states for the purpose of explaining the object of the exhibition, as well as what is required of the people, in order that the object for which the exhibition is being organized may be attained. This scheme of education, so to speak, will not be confined to the overseas states only, for the same method will be adopted to interest the people in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales.

The ultimate aim and object of the exhibition is not so much to show to other countries what the British empire is capable of producing, but it has as its chief object the bringing together of the mother country and the various overseas dominions. With this object in view it is expected that a number of congresses will be held, at which all manner of questions tending to draw closer the bonds uniting the overseas states and the mother country will be discussed. These conferences will deal with such subjects as agriculture, education, the press, commerce, etc.

A large number of influential persons have already joined the committee, and it is safe to say that if all the hopes of the organizers are realized, as they doubtless will be, the imperial exhibition will be the finest of its nature ever held in this country.

INDIA TO HAVE ITS FIRST CHRISTIAN UNIVERSITY SOON

(Special to The Monitor.)
CALCUTTA—The idea which was originally conceived some hundred years ago of establishing a Christian university in India seems at last to be taking definite shape. Two years ago efforts were made, both in Great Britain and in America, to raise funds for the purpose, and though the amount estimated for, which was upward of £250,000, has not been obtained, still sufficient money has come in to allow of a start being made. A staff of one Indian and five European professors will accordingly take up their residence in Serampore during the month of October, and students are expected from all over India.

ton, the first negro ever received at the Danish court, was Monday night entertained at dinner by the King and Queen

Queen talked for an hour with Mr. Washington, chiefly on the Danish West In-

MAY SUBSIDIZE CABLE SERVICE FOR AUSTRALIANS

(Special to The Monitor.)
LONDON—A proposition which, if accepted, will undoubtedly prove to be of the greatest advantage to Australia, is now under consideration by the Australian House of Representatives and the Senate. The proposal is a scheme for a subsidy, for a press cable service which will insure a minimum quantity of 6000 words of the cable service being transmitted weekly from Europe or from America. In the event of the scheme being carried through, a condition will be made that the information supplied to the London agents by the high commissioner in London must be transmitted to Australia, also Australian newspapers will be permitted to become subscribers at certain rates.

will be introduced into Germany.

ROYAL SOCIETY PRESIDENT COMMENDS PUBLIC SCHOOLS

(Special to The Monitor.)
OTTAWA, Ont.—The Royal Society of Canada, which has been in session at the capital, reflects the growing sense of importance which is being felt regarding the Dominion, both at home and abroad.
The Presidential address by Rev. Dr.
Bryce of Winnipeg dealt with the rapid, orderly and "British" development of the Great West. "The Canadianization of Western Canada," Dr. Bryce chose as his title, and from knowledge gained at first hand in the "new" provinces he spoke optimistically of the fusion of those races which have met together in that land of the home-seeker. In the Winnipeg public schools, he computed, there were about 4000 children from foreign lands, representing 26 different languages with the necessarily varying customs and ideals this would indicate;
but through the educational system of the province (and similarly in the other provinces) these children were being drawn, together with the English speaking population, into a united British Canadianism. The little foreigners delighted in being regarded as "Canadians."
Of the United States incomers Dr. Bryce said that "without exception these settlers have declared their preference for Canadian laws."

From this statement the speaker went on to mention the exceptionally good work being done for Canada by these trained and progressive pioneers from across the border, and called them "most valuable, peace-loving, law-abiding citizens."

Following the original tendency of the society toward interest and advancement of education, the session this year took advantage of the newly-formed royal commission on technical education at Ottawa to extend to the commissioners a hearty welcome, and arrange for an address by the chairman, Prof. J. W.
Robertson.

In its constitution this royal society of Canada has largely been modeled after the pattern of the British Royal Society, but in its divisions into "sections" it followed the Institute of France.
When the Marquis of Lorne founded the society in 1882 there were 80 members, and later this number was made 100—25 for each of the four sections.

Vacancies are filled by the election of Canadians who must have attained high standing in their various professions, an effort being made to maintain, if possible, the relative proportion of French and English speaking members.

In each of the four sections many papers were presented this year—especially interesting, perhaps, were the contributions on "Radium Experiments," by Professors A. S. Eve and D. McIntosh.

The popular lecture of the season was given by Professor McKernon of McGill University, the subject being "Aviation."
During the presentation of papers in the historical section the celebration of the century of peace between the United States and Great Britain was heartily commended.

VARSITY FOOTBALL OUTLOOK AT YALE IS NOT VERY PROMISING

Lack of Veterans the Most Marked in Years and Ends Are Only Parts of Line Well Filled.

SOME GOOD PUNTERS

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Even though Yale has defeated both Wesleyan and Syracuse during the first week of the football season, considerable apprehension is already felt here because of the fact that she was taxed to the utmost to defeat the latter team. The eleven has shown such a marked weakness on the line that Coach Coy will have to do marvels with it during the later preliminary games to round out an aggregation that will be able to cope successfully with the stronger elevens during the latter part of the season. The football outlook here is at present quite discouraging.

It is evident that it is not because of the new rules that Yale has not come up to the old-time standard of play; but simply the lack of first-class material. To add to the misfortune caused by the failure of Savage and Vaughn to report for the team this fall, two of her very best players, Boneisler, end, and Fields, will be out of the game part of the season at least. The absence of these players deprives the team of the men upon whom a great part of the success of the team depended.

The presence of new and untried material in the lineup has already had its bad results, causing fumbling unheard of before on a Yale team. There seems to be nobody on the eleven who can handle punts accurately and run them back, now that Fields is out. However, Philbin, the fullback who captained the freshmen eleven last fall, with more experience, promises to come up to the standard of his brother Steve, who distinguished himself running back punts for Yale last year.

Yale has a wealth of punters this year, but none of them have shown proficiency enough in other parts of the game to place them on the team. Freeman, an end, and Walter Camp, Jr., fullback, have been footing the ball consistently from 45 to 60 yards; but they are still second-string men, because of lack of aggressiveness. Deming, who only a few days ago was doubtful whether he would play football at all this fall, has already attained the attention of the coaches by his wonderful punting. Not since Coy has such good kicking been seen on Yale field as was displayed by Deming in the Syracuse game Saturday, when as a third string fullback he went into the game and held Syracuse safe by his long punts.

The line this year is very light and weak. Morris at center, however, has been playing a very fast, brilliant game, repeatedly getting down the field on punts before the ends and getting his man. The guards and tackles, on the other hand, had considerable difficulty in stopping the line plunges of the Syracuse backs and opening up holes for Yale's backfield. As most of the linemen are still inexperienced in their positions, there should be a gradual improvement as the season progresses.

With Kilpatrick, Brooks, Berneiser, Reilly and Coates to take the case of the ends, Yale will be stronger in these positions than last year. And it is likewise the case at quarterback with both the veterans Carey and Horn to look after the running of the team.

Captain Daly is the only veteran left in the backfield, but there is an abundance of other fast material for these positions, making that part of the team comparatively strong. Among these are Philbin, Kister, Robinson, Deming and Potter, all of whom have shown up well during the past week.

HARVARD TRYING OUT NEW PLAYS

Coaches Put Men Through First Secret Practise of the Year and Varsity Training Table Is Started.

Realizing that new plays will have to be worked up in order to win the bigger games on the 1910 schedule, the Harvard varsity football coaches have already begun to rehearse some and held the first secret practise of the year on Soldiers field Monday afternoon. Secret practise will be continued today and tomorrow and probably on the first three days of every week during the season.

No scrimmage was held Monday, and after a long blackboard talk, the squad was drilled in several new plays. The linemen practised breaking through, while the ends and backs were instructed by Coaches Haughton and Leary. J. W. Farley '99, H. Foster '07 and H. Fisher, Jr., '10 were on the field and assisted the coaches. All the men were in first class condition except Corbett, who will be out for a few days.

The teams lined up for signal practise as follows:

The training table was started this morning. The following men reported at the Varsity Club breakfast:

T. J. Campbell '12, H. F. Corbett '11, S. M. Felton '13, R. T. Fisher '12, T. Frothingham '13, F. H. Gardner '13, E. A. Graustein '13, F. D. Huntington '12, H. A. Johnson '11, F. H. Leslie '12, H. C. ## WOODCOCK AGAIN BROWN'S COACH

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Fred W. Woodcock has been appointed coach of the Brown University baseball team for the season of 1911. Woodcock coached the team last spring and out of material which was not of the best he developed a nine which was a credit to the university.

His chief difficulty last year was in developing a pitching staff which could replace Nourse, but this year such a contingency is removed, for all of his old pitchers except Bliss are in college. Only three men, Bliss, Regnier and Hennessey, are lost through graduation.

WILL HOLD GRAND PRIZE AUTO RACE

NEW YORK—The grand prize race for automobiles will be held over the Vanderbilt cup course on Long Island on Saturday Oct. 15. A decision not to cancel the permit was reached Monday night by the board of supervisors of Nassau county.

To obviate the crush of automobiles at daybreak and earlier, the race will be started at 10 o'clock in the morning instead of 8, the time at which the Vanderbilt contestants were sent away.

HARVARD FALL TENNIS:

The annual Harvard fall tennis tournament will begin Oct. 10 for singles and Oct. 12 for doubles.

Important Football Practise

TACKLING THE DUMMY AT DARTMOUTH. One of the most interesting and necessary branches of perfecting a varsity football eleven is teaching the players how properly to tackle an opponent by means of the dummy.

HANOVER, N. H.—The presence of Dr. John C. O'Connor, coach of the Dartmouth '07 and '08 teams on the field Monday, put new life into the men. He was given charge of the ends, who received the severest drill of the season in running down punts.

The tackling dummy was put up for the first time and the linemen and backs put to work on it under the direction of Coach Keady and later Coach O'Connor. The tackling was aggressive and showed little tendency toward diving.

PRINCETON HAS HARD SCRIMMAGE

Varsity Defeats Scrubs by One Point—Team Expected to Make Good Showing With Villanova.

PRINCETON, N. J.—The Princeton varsity football team had its hands full defeating the scrub Monday afternoon, the practice ending with the first team in the lead by the smallest possible margin of one point.

The offensive work of the first string of backs lacked its usual strength, and, except for several remarkable dodging runs by Pendleton and a cleverly manipulated forward pass, Pendleton to Bredemus, the varsity could make little headway against the second eleven. On the other hand, the scrub could not gain consistently against the varsity, whose defense was strong.

Dunlop snatched up the ball on a fumble by a varsity player, and with a clear field before him ran 20 yards for a touchdown. Sawyer failed to kick the goal, and so gave the varsity a chance to win.

The first team's touchdown came as a result of a forward pass from Pendleton to Bredemus which was beautifully executed, the play netting 30 yards. The team is expected to draw up better before the Villanova game on Wednesday.

ENGLISH TEAM FOR AMERICA

(Special to The Monitor.)

LONDON—With the news that the dates of the matches and the composition of the teams have been practically settled the international challenge scheme assumes a more tangible shape. Eight players have been invited to join the British team to visit America next April. These eight will go through a series of trial games in America and four will ultimately be selected to represent this country. The ponies will be shipped in advance and something like six weeks will be allowed for trial and practise games.

Although this system is open to some objections it seems the best that can be done in the circumstances, for Captain Lloyd has been obliged to make his arrangements somewhat hastily. Invitations have been issued to the following: W. S. Buckmaster, who will probably captain the team on the ground; Capt. F. W. Barrett, fifteenth Hussars; Noel Edwards, ninth lancers; Capt. Leslie Cheape, Kings dragon guards; E. W. Palmes, tenth Hussars; F. M. Freake and R. Grenfell. Captain Lloyd will, of course, be included in the team.

TRACK MEETING TONIGHT.

A meeting of all candidates for the Harvard varsity and freshman track and cross-country teams will be held in the assembly room of the Union this evening at 7:30 o'clock. The speakers will be W. F. Garcelon '95, graduate manager of athletics; C. C. Little '10, captain of the victorious 1910 team; R. C. Foster '11, captain of the team; Alfred Shrubbs, coach of the cross-country team; W. E. Quinn, coach of the field and hurdle events, and other undergraduates. Not only will the fall work for the cross-country and track men be outlined, but the plans for the whole year will be discussed.

LYMAN FAVORS BAY STATE RANGE

Inspector of Rifle Practise for Marine Corps Wants Government to Purchase It for Target Grounds.

Capt. Charles H. Lyman, inspector of rifle practise for the United States marine corps, wants the federal government to purchase the Bay State military range at Wakefield. If this is not carried through, he recommends that a plot of ground be purchased in Massachusetts and a range where marines can go in the summer for target practise be established.

Particular stress is laid on the advantages of the Bay State range by Captain Lyman. The officer was in charge of the range during the greater part of target practise this season.

The marines from Newport, New York, Boston and Portland, as well as detachments from the North Atlantic squadron use the Bay State range. Captain Lyman states that the range is one of the best equipped in the country and is for sale. He says the sum of $2000 is available for purchasing a new range on the Pacific coast and intimates that this sum be used for securing a range in Massachusetts.

If a suitable tract of land cannot be obtained in Massachusetts and the Bay State range cannot be purchased, Captain Lyman picks Connecticut as the state where inducements to establish such a summer rifle camp could be made.

Speaking of conditions at the Bay State range while he was executive officer, Captain Lyman says: "The work at the camp has been excellent and the discipline of the men and the appearance of the camp have been favorably commented upon by officers of the Massachusetts volunteer militia."

The statistics table for the Wakefield range shows that 636 men fired during the season; 38 qualified as expert riflemen, 103 as sharpshooters, 53 as marksmen, 393 unqualified, 49 fired but failed to qualify or attain a higher grade.

PENN FOOTBALL PROSPECTS GOOD

Mercer Develops Into Fine Backfield Player—Team Plays West Virginia Next Saturday.

PHILADELPHIA—Pennsylvania's football prospects are brightening every day. Monday afternoon Kraemer, one of the best guards of last year's freshman squad, joined the team, and Smith expects him to win a regular berth at once. Hutchinson, the fullback, was on the field, but not in uniform. The coaches expect him to be able to play against West Virginia on Saturday.

Smith is congratulating himself Mercer did not play at end against Gettysburg last Saturday. Had he played on the line the coach would not have discovered how good a backfield player he is. He is confidently expected to develop into as good a back as Hollenback of the 1908 team. He will be kept in the backfield exclusively hereafter.

There was a long preliminary practise in the rudiments Monday, followed by a sharp practice match between the varsity and the scrub. The varsity scored one touchdown, made by Mercer's line plunging. Scott ran the team in the absence of Hutchinson.

ATHLETICS PAID AT CAMBRIDGE

At a meeting Monday night of the Harvard Athletic Association, newly organized for the year, the principal business transacted was the adoption of the graduate treasurer's report for the year ending July 31. The total income of the athletic association during the year was $130,562.07 and the expenses were $127,945.08, leaving a balance for the new year of $2615.08. This profit was about $150 less than in the preceding year, though the total volume of business was about $3000 greater.

As always, the income and expenditures of the varsity football team were the largest items in the list. Last year the receipts of the football season were $88,387.48, representing a gain of nearly $10,000 over the year preceding. The expenses were almost exactly the same in the two years, amounting last season to $31,078.81.

The only other athletic ventures that have been prevented from joining the lawn tennis association. The profit from the three sources is used to support the large number of minor teams that are kept going by the athletic association.

NEW YACHTING CLASS FOR 1911.

LONDON—Orders for three 10-meter yachts having been placed, it has been decided to establish this class for the season of 1911. In view of this announcement the Field hopes that a German 10-meter cutter will be built with the object of competing in the international regatta which is to be held in British waters as the first festival of international yacht racing under the present rule; also that other nationalities will build to this class, although the 15-meter cutters seem to have been preferred by Spanish and German yachtsmen. The chief difference between the new 19 and 15 meter will be that the former will have additional accommodation amidships for a separate owner's cabin and bathroom, which make a great difference to the living and cruising comfort of a vessel. The new 10-meter boat will be practically a 100-ton cutter.

TUFTS WILL TAKE TWENTY PLAYERS

MEDFORD—The Tufts football team, 20 strong, leaves Boston tomorrow morning on the Colonial express for New Haven, where they are to play the Yale football team that afternoon. The players who are to take the trip are: Captain Ireland, Bohlin, Stevens, Houston, Weber, Dunn, Merrill, Russell, Mountford, Winslow, Gaw, Strong, Richter, Tattam, Costanza, Kewer, Quennell, Carter, Hebb, Coach Sheehy and Manager Elmer I. MacPhie.

The students are planning a send-off for the team when it leaves the college early Wednesday morning. It is probable that many of the students will accompany the men to the station and there give them a rousing and encouraging farewell.

NATIONAL BASEBALL COMMISSION NAMES WORLD SERIES DATA

First Game Scheduled for October 17 at Philadelphia—Forty-Six Players Said to Be Eligible to Play.

UMPIRES ARE NAMED

WORLD'S SERIES SCHEDULE.
Monday, Oct. 17, at Philadelphia.
Tuesday, Oct. 18, at Philadelphia.
Wednesday, Oct. 19, open.
Thursday, Oct. 20, at Chicago.
Friday, Oct. 21, at Chicago.
Saturday, Oct. 22, at Philadelphia.
Sunday, Oct. 23, at Chicago.
Seventh game if required to be awarded by lot.

CINCINNATI—At the meeting of the national baseball commission in this city Monday, full arrangements were made for the playing of the world's series between the Chicago Nationals and the Philadelphia Athletics. The first game of the series will be played in Philadelphia, beginning at 2 o'clock on Monday, Oct. 17.

In case a fifth game is required to settle the supremacy it will be played Saturday, Oct. 22, after a run by special train from Chicago to Philadelphia, and in case a sixth game is required, another fast run in a special train will be made from Philadelphia to Chicago in time to play it in Chicago on Sunday, Oct. 23.

If the series should not be completed by this time the place of playing the seventh game will be determined by the toss of a coin.

In case any game is postponed by reason of bad weather, the succeeding games are to be moved ahead, except that, in any event, the game scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 23, is to be played in Chicago.

Forty-six players, 23 on each team, are declared eligible, as follows:

Philadelphia—Atkins, Bender, Barry, Baker, Coombs, Collins, Donohue, Dygert, Davis, Derrick, Houser, Hartsel, Krause, Lapp, Livingstone, Lord, Morgan, Murphy, Melous, Olaring, Plank, Thomas, Strunk, Chicago—Archer, Beaumont, Brown, Cole, Chance, Evers, Foxen, Hofman, Kling, Kane, McIntire, Needham, Overall, Peffer, Prier, Richie, Reulbach, Sheckard, Steinfeldt, Schulte, Tinker, Weaver, Zimmermann.

Rigler and O'Day for the National league and Connolly and Sheridan for the American league have been named as the umpires.

The scorers selected by the National commission are Francis Richter of Philadelphia and Taylor Spink of St. Louis.

John A. Heydler, secretary to President Lynch of the National league, and Robert McKey, secretary to President Johnson of the American league, have been selected business managers of the series.

Reserved seat prices were fixed at from $1 to $5, while the price for general admission will be 50 cents.

The commission also provided that rain checks shall be issued each day, regardless of weather conditions.

The players as usual will receive 60 per cent of the proceeds of the first four games, but to allow the players to benefit by a Sunday game, if the series goes to six, the commission put a provision in the rules that if none of the first four games' receipts equals those of the Sunday game in Chicago, in case such a game is played, the players' proportionate share shall be made on the basis of that game.

Having in mind the trouble with ticket speculators during past world's series the commission added the following warning to its announcements:

"The public is cautioned against paying any higher prices for tickets than those fixed in the official schedules. Every effort will be made to prevent ticket scalping and the licenses granted to the tickets will be revoked if they are found in the hands of scalpers."

"The commission requests the cooperation of the public to bring about proper results and has the assurance that the various municipal authorities will assist them in their work."

"The management of the respective clubs will announce immediately after the promulgation of this order at which time and at what places reserved seat tickets will be put on sale and the conditions applying to their purchase, the conditions of sale, however, to be subject to approval of the national commission."

"Both clubs have been limited in their sale of reserved seats, and as each ground has a capacity of more than 30,000 the public need have no fear as to gaining admission."

RATIONAL GOLF BY JASON ROGERS

While many golfers devote both money and trouble to keep their iron clubs clean and highly polished, most real golfers prefer to play with clubs with dirty and maybe rusty faces. The rougher face helps give the club a purchase on the ball, and thus guards against skidding.

Most of the leading professionals, such as James Braid and Harry Vardon, use what are known as scored faces on their irons, made by ridges or holes punched in. This enables them to keep their club looking pretty for their exhibition matches and prevents skidding.

On a rainy day when the club head gets wet and slippery many a perfectly hit ball will skid on the face of the club just like an automobile will on a slimy asphalt road. The drawn marks of the dots of the ball on the club face will show this.

Likewise the faces of new wooden clubs as they come from the professionals' shop present a roughened surface made by drawing a coarse file back and forward in one direction a few times. This roughness unquestionably produces a more positive contact with the ball.

On a wet day it is well to try to keep the face of the wooden clubs dry as far as possible. Chalking their faces before starting and occasionally during the round aids in keeping them dry and prevents the water soaking in and causing swelling and cracking.

Nicely polished clubs fresh from the professionals look best but unless they are scored they are not as useful as others that may look only fit for the scrap heap.

membership is by firms, the annual dues being several hundred dollars. In many instances the literature of these organizations is addressed to the firm and no one takes a personal interest in it.

"The membership in the Boston Chamber of Commerce is individual, causing each member to feel an individual, actual responsibility calculated to bring out the best result for the body as a whole.

"Problems that mean much to all New England have been in the past successfully solved by the chamber, and at present a number of matters of vital importance to this section are engaging its attention. There is no New England city that would not benefit directly or indirectly in the growth of an organization which has so plainly demonstrated, in what it has done and is doing, that it is not a purely local proposition. The large number of applications for membership received from cities outside of Boston indicate that this fact is recognized.

"The biggest, best and busiest men in Boston have identified themselves with the chamber, which has done much to bring about united and concerted effort along all lines looking for the betterment of New England. These men, if unable to give their time and energy to this work, have shown themselves ready and willing to give generous financial support to the movement.

"In this connection, it may be said that more than 25 Boston firms had more than five men per firm members of the chamber, while one large house put in 27. Another corporation, which has had four members for some time, has just sent in applications for 10 more.

It is only fair that the large concerns should contribute in this way, as their interests are so large that the activities of the chamber often mean great financial gain to them.

"The chamber is not pleading for money, what it wants is an active, intelligent, representative membership, made up of all those interested in seeing New England represented in all questions affecting her welfare, by a large and powerful organization well-fitted to conserve the interests of this section under any circumstances or combination.

"And it is plain that the larger the membership, the greater the prestige of the body, and the more funds on hand to carry on its work.

"The membership committee has recently been increased to 25 members, all of whom are now actively engaged in the campaign outlined by Chairman E. K. Hall. They have in preparation a long list of those likely to be interested in the work of the chamber and to call their attention, either in person or by letter, to the desirability of membership in the organization.

"In conclusion," said Mr. Johnson, "I am convinced that great numbers of people in New England would derive much benefit, in many ways, through the work of the chamber, even if they never visited Boston. The literature alone would more than recompense them for the $25 membership dues, these publications alone being worth the cost of membership, as, for instance, the recent exposure of methods used by itinerant merchants, printed in the chamber's monthly organ, Advance New England.

"In addition to this publication, which includes articles and editorials on vital questions, the chamber issues a weekly, called the Chamber of Commerce News, which keeps the members posted as to the most recent developments along the line of that body's activities. This is done so successfully that non-resident members are thereby able to keep in close touch with the organization, and as conversant with its plans, aims and accomplishments as the man with an office in the Chamber of Commerce building.

"A glance over the files of the Chamber of Commerce News will show what the chamber has accomplished during the past six months, as an earnest of what may be done in the future for New England's betterment.

"Among these achievements may be mentioned the securing of a new site for Boston's great fish industry near the Commonwealth pier in South Boston; the striking from the river and harbors bill the amendment providing that within certain fixed hours the draws in the Charles river railroad bridges should not be opened; the establishment of an information bureau which not only supplies commercial information quickly and efficiently, but also does an important work in investigating charities.

"That pulse and forum of the chamber, the assembly, was established only last May. The workmen's compensation matter was also taken up by the chamber at that time, with the result that the Governor has appointed a commission to investigate the subject. A campaign to educate retailers in possible savings in insurance rates, the favorable decision in the Missouri river rate case, the securing of the next biennial convention of the international congress of chambers of commerce, and the amicable adjustment of the Copley square dispute, are all due to the work of the chamber.

"Other achievements are the new harbor line, meaning certain improvement of the East Boston waterfront and a more favorable location for the new immigration station; the preparation of a bill for the abatement of the smoke nuisance, the establishment of a new and satisfactory street parade route, the successful opposition to the closing of Boston's parkways to automobiles, the securing of lower rates to the South for New England granite shippers.

"The chamber has ahead of it a season far busier than it has ever experienced, and one fraught with great possibilities. Public questions of a most varied and vital character demand attention from the business men of Boston.

"Definite recommendations are soon to be made by the manufacturers committee with a view to bringing about the location of more new industries in municipal and metropolitan Boston, through stimulating local capital to invest in home enterprises, and through provision for better methods of finding suitable factory locations.

"A hard winter's work is before the forestry committee and the many other active supporters of the Weeks bill for the preservation of the White mountain forests. The bill will be voted on in the Senate Feb. 15. The date set for consideration is less than three weeks before adjournment, which comes on March 4.

"Whether or not the eastern railroads will be allowed to advance their freight rates will depend largely upon the character of the fight shown by the eastern commercial organizations before the interstate commerce commission. This fight has already begun. New England manufacturers in particular would suffer heavily if the advances should be allowed.

"The struggle to prevent the New England railroads from putting into effect the 48-hour demurrage rules is not yet over, although the chamber's petition with the interstate commerce commission asking for both an investigation and the suspension of the present rules until regulations shall have been made by the commission has been granted and a hearing will be held the middle of this month.

"The special demurrage committee of New England organizations, also headed by Mr. Ives, has from the first had the hearty support of the business men in a contest for what is obviously to the advantage of all shippers in the section, namely, the retention of the longer free time.

"I will be only too glad," said Mr. Johnson, "to hear from all those that are interested in these questions, and to send literature telling of the work the chamber is doing for the good of New England. Tell them to call or write to E. C. Johnson, 221 State street, and I will at once take up the matter with them."

MRS. EVANS PAYS HIGHEST BEVERLY TAX RATE IN YEAR

BEVERLY.—Mrs. Robert Dawson Evans of Dawson hall, Burgess Point, will pay the largest tax assessed in Beverly this year, the totals reaching $77,352.42.

Of this assessment over $5,000,000 is for personal property, the largest assessment in the city tax book. Mrs. Evans is the owner of the cottage where President Taft has spent the past two summers and is among the 12 richest women in America.

Frederick Ayer of "Avalon" Prides Crossing, is the second on the list and will pay a tax of $18,964.76. Mr. Ayer is one of the summer colonists who has brought his personal property in for assessment and is taxed on $1,003,770. Mr. Ayer has a magnificent summer home at Prides Crossing and his action in bringing his personal property to Beverly may be followed by other summer colonists.

Henry Clay Frick of Prides Crossing pays individually a big tax, and his check for his tax this year will total $8,755.20. Of the assessment $553,000 is on real estate, most of it being levied on his Eagle Rock estate at Prides Crossing.

Mr. Edwin Carleton Swift of Swift-Moor, Prides Crossing, pays a tax of $4,385.96 and the E. C. Swift estate a tax of $4,527.32. Judge William H. Moore of New York will pay a tax of $3,617 on his estate at Rockmarge, Prides Crossing.

Most of the tax bills have been sent out and returns are already being made at the office of City Collector Andrew S. Edwards.

PRESIDENT TRIES TO LOWER RECORD FOR GOLF COURSE

BEVERLY, Mass.—The President is golfing today with John Hays Hammond, president of the National League of Republican Clubs, and Capt. Archibald W. Butt over the 18-hole course at the Myopia Hunt Club.

President Taft is trying to lower his record of 101 for this season. Last summer he went round in 78, but the new trap bunkers have interfered with his driving and mid-iron work so far this year.

The President's yacht, the U. S. S. Sylph, which has been moored off Burgess Point for three months, sailed this morning for New York, whence it will go on overhauling. Mr. Taft is still house-hunting, and it is expected that the President will announce his selection of the "summer White House" for 1911 some time this week.

COLUMBUS DAY PARADE REVIEW.—Governor Draper will review the Columbus day parade from the State House steps. Because of the time it is expected to require for passing a given point, a special reviewing stand is to be erected. He probably will be attended by his entire staff.

ALL PARTS OF STATE SHOW IN CONVENTION OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS

NORTH ADAMS, Mass.—Twelve hundred delegates from all parts of the state are in attendance at the twenty-first annual convention of the Massachusetts Sunday School Association in North Adams today, Wednesday and Thursday.

The program shows morning, afternoon and evening sessions over which President Augustus R. Smith of Lee, and Vice President W. F. Andrews will preside.

The sessions will be held in the St. Johns Episcopal, the Methodist Episcopal, the First Baptist and the Congregational churches.

The opening session will be this afternoon in the St. Johns Episcopal church at 3 o'clock. It will be conducted by the Rev. Marshall E. Mott, the rector, assisted by the Rev. Henry L. Wriston of Boston and the Rev. A. H. Pease of Natick.

This evening there will be an address upon "The Need of the Times," by the Rev. A. M. Hyde, pastor of the Porter church, Brockton, and the largest Congregational Sunday school in Massachusetts.

Wednesday there will be addresses by the Rev. B. S. Winchester, Boston; Hamilton S. Conant, Boston; the Rev. Vincent Ravi, Cambridge; the Rev. H. A. Durfee, state secretary of Vermont; the Rev. Burt Leon Yorke, West Medford; Miss Phila M. Whipple, Pittsfield; the Rev. C. E. McCole, Lawrence; Miss Margaret Slattery, Fitchburg. In the evening there will be a reunion of the summer school alumni.

Wednesday evening William A. Brown, Chicago, international superintendent of missionary instruction, will deliver an address.

Mrs. Herbert B. Clark will preside at a special service for women at which Miss Margaret Slattery will deliver an address.

Thursday the principal speakers will be the Rev. J. W. Rae, state secretary of Connecticut, and Dr. George J. Fisher, New York, of the international committee of Y. M. C. A.

Thursday evening President Harry Garfield of Williams College and the Rev. F. Watson Hannan, pastor of the New York Avenue Methodist Episcopal church of Brooklyn, will speak.

The program committee, which consists of Augustus R. Smith, Harry B. Bosson, Hamilton S. Conant, Dr. W. F. Andrews, Herbert B. Clark, Dr. B. S. Winchester and the Rev. W. I. Shattuck, will present a handsome souvenir program to every delegate.

Local committees have made arrangements to care for the visiting delegates.

NEW UNIVERSITY EXTENSION WORK ATTRACTS MANY

Prof. James Hardy Ropes, chairman of the university extension commission, declared today that the showing of the opening of the first courses Monday night and the enrolment so far fully met his expectations.

"I am greatly pleased with the results so far," said Professor Ropes. "The enrolment will continue throughout this week and next, and undoubtedly there will be considerable additions. I expect a total enrolment of not less than 500. It is certainly gratifying to note the appreciative spirit shown by the public toward this new system of education.

"All the main courses will have opened by this evening. The largest is that on English literature and composition, by Charles T. Copeland, the next in favor is on economics, by Prof. H. C. Metcalf of Tufts College, and other large courses are one on English composition by Prof. B. L. Sharp of Boston University, and one on English literature by Prof. E. C. Black of Boston University.

Courses for teachers beginning today in the teachers' course at Boston University are Greek history and literature, by Prof. Joseph Richard Taylor, at 4:20 p. m., and mathematics, by Prof. Judson B. Coit, at 4:20 p. m.

BOARD OF EDUCATION IS ASKED BY BOSTON FOR TRADE SCHOOLS

A move has been made by the Boston school committee for the establishment of trade schools in numerous industries. The first step toward this action was the passing of the following order at the regular meeting of the committee Monday evening:

"Ordered that the Massachusetts state board of education be and hereby is requested to establish in the city of Boston, beginning Oct. 1, 1911, an independent school of industrial training for boys and girls over 14 years of age; said school to be conducted by the Massachusetts state board of education through the school committee, acting as its agent, in accordance with the provisions of chapter 505, acts of 1906, or any amendment thereto; the proposed school to be located in the old East Boston high school-house on Meridian street, East Boston, the two and four-year courses offered to include printing, bookbinding and such other subjects as the authorities in control from time to time may decide upon, and the method of instruction to provide for as close an approach to actual shop conditions as possible."

If the petition is granted schools in printing and bookbinding will first be established, and these will be maintained equally by the city and state.

SCHFEITELS CASE HEARING PUT OVER

Judge Richardson in the superior court today put over until Monday the bill brought by Harry C. Kendrick and other creditors of B. H. Schfeitel & Co., stock brokers, asking for the appointment of a receiver for the concern.

Counsel for the defendant company informed the court that a receiver had been appointed by the federal court in New York, upon which Judge Richardson postponed the hearing set for today on the understanding that proof of the federal court's action be submitted to him, in which event the proceedings in Boston will be dismissed.

for Lieutenant-Governor, attorney-general and the other state offices.

"Possibly, however, it may have been decided to permit the Democrats of the state to exercise the free choice as to these latter offices denied to them as to the Governor and senatorship.

"The only comment I care to make is that just at a time when the Republicans throughout the country are prepared to shatter their machines and machine rule generally, it is unfortunate that machine domination of the most audacious kind should be thus thrust upon the Democrats of Massachusetts.

"Be that as it may, however, no machine can exist without public confidence nor can it withstand the force of public condemnation. As representing reforms which I firmly believe to be the hope and aspiration of the people of Massachusetts, I accept this machine challenge and I call upon the rank and file of the party to rise up and demonstrate in no doubtful manner that the nominations for the coming great reform fight will be made by the people and to settle once for all that the state machine is the servant, not the master, of the Democratic party.

"(Signed) CHAS. S. HAMLIN."

Former Senator John Quinn, Jr., of ward 7, who was declared beaten at the primaries by Edward D. Collins of ward 15 for the Democratic nomination for the Governor's council in the third council district, has been declared the legal nominee by the election commissioners, as the result of the recount completed this afternoon.

According to the official figures of the election commissioners Mr. Quinn wins by a plurality of 21 votes, 18 of which are in Boston and three in Cambridge. In today's recount Mr. Quinn made a total net gain of 53 votes—7 in ward 8, 35 in ward 7, and 11 in ward 3.

As the third council district is Democratic, Mr. Quinn's friends confidently predict his election.

The season of political conventions is on in full swing today, with a dozen important Republican and Democratic conventions and many minor ones throughout the state scheduled for the nomination of party candidates to be voted for at the November first election.

At the Republican first congressional district convention this afternoon in City Hall, Holyoke, Congressman George P. Lawrence is expected to be renominated by acclamation.

Charles H. Pearson of Brookline was unanimously nominated as Republican candidate for senator in the second Norfolk senatorial district at Wesleyan hall, Boston, today. Mr. Pearson's name was presented to the convention by Speaker of the House Joseph Walker, Dr. G. A. Dennett of Sharon presided and the Hon. A. J. Bemis of Brookline was secretary.

The Suffolk county Democratic district attorney convention is scheduled for 7:30 p. m. today, when the present district attorney, Joseph C. Pelletier, is to be again chosen. It is not believed that there will be any opposition.

After the district attorney convention is held, the Suffolk county convention will meet in the same hall. Its sole work will be to nominate a candidate for sheriff, and the nomination is expected to go to Sheriff Frederick H. Seavey. The party leaders are said to have reached an agreement by which the Democrats accept Mr. Seavey, a Republican, in exchange for a unanimous renomination of the district attorney, who is a Democrat, by the Republicans.

Councilor Walter S. Glidden of Somerville was renominated for the executive council at the fourth council district convention in Wesleyan hall today.

John A. Campbell of Boston presided and the nomination was unanimous. The Boston delegation chosen for the district committee follows: Ward 1, William H. Musgrave and John A. Campbell; ward 10, Charles H. Jones and Dr. Lewis P. Felch; ward 11, Courtenay Guild and George H. Tinkham; ward 25, Isaac F. Woodbury and Edwin I. Aldrich.

Keen interest is manifested by Worcester county Republicans in the middle district-attorney Republican convention, which will be held late this afternoon in Horticultural hall, Worcester.

Henry L. Parker of Worcester and Asst. Dist. Atty. James A. Stiles of Gardner are the rival candidates. Both claim from 25 to 30 majority in the convention.

Though Mr. Stiles says he has 130 delegates pledged to him, his supporters apparently are not so sure, and talk of getting Dist. Atty. George S. Taft, who had decided to retire, into the running as a compromise candidate, was prevalent among politicians Monday.

At the Hampshire county convention at Northampton at noon today George S. Buckner of Easthampton is expected to receive the Republican nomination for county sheriff.

Other conventions being held today are: Republican fifth council district convention, Salem; Republican seventh council district convention, Worcester; county Republican convention, Worcester; Republican eighth Middlesex senatorial district convention, Lowell.

It has been decided by the Democratic state committee to hold the state convention in Faneuil hall, rather than go elsewhere at this late date, owing to legal difficulties which have presented themselves.

The list of minor officers of the Democratic state convention has been named by the central committee as follows: James W. Synan of Pittsfield, chairman of the committee on credentials; E. Gerry Brown, chairman of the committee

Mechanics Fair Crowd Grows

Nearly every flag in naval service hung by United States marines as part of decorations.

PAUL REVERE HALL BEDECKED WITH FLAGS.

Bunting and colors hung by sailor soldiers and exhibit of small rapid fire arms on each side of the bandstand.

"Isn't that a wonderful machine?" and "How simply that is done," and "What a lot of time that would save in the kitchen," are some comments heard at Boston's Mechanics Exposition which opened in the Mechanics' building on Monday. There is an increasing crowd today that promises to be a forerunner to a record attendance before the fair closes.

Practically all of the exhibits are now in place and the decorators have effaced the few bare spots so that the halls present a bewildering display of the extensive manufactures of New England.

The educational value of the exhibition is indicated by the lively interest taken in the various improvements and time and labor saving devices. It is a far cry from the modern shoe factory running full blast and the real flying machines shown to the smaller exhibits, but each finds an interested throng at its booth.

on permanent organization; John F. MacDonald of Boston, chairman of the committee on the balance of the ticket; Frederic L. Stimson of Dedham, chairman of the committee on resolutions.

At a conference of representatives of the three candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor, Charles S. Hamlin, Eugene N. Foss and James H. Vahey, with a special sub-committee of the Democratic state committee, for the purpose of coming to an agreement as to the rules of procedure at the convention, the request of Mr. Hamlin and Mr. Vahey that the Australian ballot system of voting be used, was refused on the ground that the delegates acted in a representative capacity and their constituents had the right to know how they voted.

Whitfield Tuck, on behalf of Mr. Vahey, protested against the selection of chairmen of the various committees all of whom, he said, are anti-Vahey men. Chairman Frederick J. Macleod of the state committee said that he would appoint a Vahey man to the chairmanship of one of the committees if he could induce any one of the present chairmen to resign.

Predict Big "Night Before"

One by one Democratic leaders from various sections of the state are arriving in town to make their calls at the Democratic state committee headquarters, and by tonight delegates to the state convention to be held Thursday will be pouring in from all quarters preparatory to the right royal contest which is to be waged by the three candidates for the gubernatorial honors.

Wednesday night will be one of the biggest "nights before" that Massachusetts politicians ever saw, and it is even asserted that nothing to equal it was ever witnessed by Boston politicians. With both the Republican and Democratic state conventions occurring here on Thursday, Boston will fairly teem with politics on the great "night before."

While the Republican leaders have always made the night before the convention a notable occasion, with the Governor and United States senator as the headlines at the American house, the Democratic leaders have seldom made quite so much of the occasion, but this year it is planned to eclipse all records.

The official headquarters for the Massachusetts Democracy on Wednesday night will be the historic old Quincy house, and practically every room is now engaged, with Charles S. Hamlin, Eugene N. Foss and James H. Vahey each reserving an elaborate suite of rooms as headquarters, in addition to the suite to be occupied by the state committee.

Mayor John F. Fitzgerald is not expected to have quarters at the Quincy house Wednesday evening, but he will not be far off, and from a suite of rooms in a nearby hotel the mayor will keep his eye on the proceedings and himself in touch with the Boston delegation quite as effectively as if he were to command the situation in person at the Quincy house.

He will be in close touch at all times with the state committee headquarters at the hotel, and it is said the Democratic slate to be put through in case Congressman Eugene N. Foss is chosen may be compiled at the mayor's "night before" headquarters.

BOARD OF MISSION'S SECRETARY REVIEWS TURKISH SITUATION

kish leaders are not a little alarmed at the avidity with which many of the Moslems, especially among the Albanians of Macedonia, have taken to the idea of religious liberty and modern ideas.

"When constitutional government was proclaimed, largely through their own efforts, many of the more enlightened Albanian leaders began to plan for national schools upon the modern basis, in which their own language written with Roman characters should be used.

"This was not pleasing to the Turks in power, since it would open at once a breach between this people upon whom they are most dependent and the Turkish-speaking Mohammedan government at Constantinople. For months this conflict has been waging, and it is now near a conclusion. Albania is determined to have a larger measure of freedom and Turkey is bound she shall not have it.

"It would be of lasting value to Turkey and no less to American interests if the Chamber of Commerce of Boston or New York or Chicago, or all together, should invite Turkey to send to this country as its guests a large delegation of her most intelligent and enterprising citizens to study our industries, commercial enterprises, educational and philanthropic institutions. This is what Turkey supremely needs at present, that her prejudice against Christian countries and enterprises may be removed."

SPANISH CITY HALL DYNAMITED.

MADRID—The city hall at Baena, in southern Spain, was wrecked today by a dynamite explosion. It is believed the perpetrators of the deed sought the life of the mayor. Several suspects are under arrest.

THREE MEN SOUGHT FOR BLOWING UP THE LOS ANGELES TIMES

SAN FRANCISCO—The police of this city are almost positive that the three men giving the names of Leonard, Morris and Bryson who purchased 500 pounds of dynamite from the Giant Powder plant at Oakland on Sept. 24 are responsible for the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times on Saturday.

Atty. Earl Rogers and Detective William Burns, who are here investigating the clue, learned today that the three men anchored a launch at Sausalito from Sept. 21 to 23, and that on the night of Sept. 22 they gave the vessel a new coat of paint. On Sept. 23, the detectives learned, the three men went to an aluminum goods store in San Francisco and purchased two sets of name plates bearing the word "Peerless." The next day the three men in the launch, with the name "Peerless" on the side of the launch, appeared at the Giant Powder Company's plant and purchased 500 pounds of dynamite.

Burns and Rogers are both convinced that on the night of Sept. 24 the three men again changed the name of the vessel and possibly painted it over in order to throw the police off the scent. No launch going under the name of "Peerless" is known on the bay and the authorities are now working on the theory that the missing launch is still in this vicinity under another name.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Under the stimulus of proffered rewards aggregating $100,000, hundreds of policemen, detectives and private citizens in all Pacific coast cities are searching for clues which may lead to the arrest of the conspirators who blew up the Los Angeles Times building on Saturday and caused the death of more than a score of persons and attempted the destruction of the homes of General Otis, owner of the Times, and of F. J. Zeelandelaar, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

The coroner's inquest was in progress today, but is not expected to finish until the search of the ruins of the Times building is completed. Meanwhile heavy guards continue about the homes of General Otis, General Manager Chandler of the Times, President Zeelandelaar of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, and a number of public buildings.

Postmaster Harrison has recently received letters warning him that the postoffice would be blown up and this structure is also under guard. General Otis is accompanied by a personal bodyguard wherever he goes.

Police and civil officers believe that at least three men were concerned, and the city has placed a price of $10,000 on the head of each. The county has voted an additional reward of $5000 for every man captured and convicted, and members of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association offered a reward of $50,000, of which $25,000 has been subscribed.

Upon the assumption that at least three men were responsible for the explosion, the combined offers of reward thus approximate almost $100,000, a figure almost unprecedented in the annals of criminal pursuits. The entire city is aroused. One newspaper which has been friendly to union labor printed a first page editorial today demanding that, in view of the strictures directed at the unions concerning the explosion, the strikes now on be called off.

Chief Galloway said that he expected to have one or all of the conspirators in custody soon. He expects news from San Francisco, whence has come the most promising clue thus far developed.

William J. Burns, a detective employed in the graft cases in San Francisco, is at work in that city with Los Angeles detectives who were sent there on receipt of information that dynamite, believed to have been the same as that found in the bomb at Zeelandelaar's home, was purchased near San Francisco by men giving the names of Leonard, Bryson and Morris.

Two iron foundries, the Craig shipyard at Long Beach, the Alexandria hotel annex, now in course of construction, and several other large steel buildings where there are strikes, are heavily guarded.

Many clues are under investigation, and in compliance with orders from the chief of police every one falling within the police classification of "undesirable and dangerous" is arrested. Arrests are being made almost hourly. These arrests, however, are regarded as merely perfunctory.

WHITE STAR BOAT FOR QUEENSTOWN IS FREIGHT FULL

Rearrangement of the cargo of the White Star Line steamship Cymric, Captain Howarth, caused a half hour's delay in the scheduled sailing time of that vessel from her berth at Charlestown just before noon today. The vessel is bound for Queenstown and Liverpool, with 246 passengers, 46 of whom are sailors and the rest steerage.

Religious services were held in the saloon of the ship just before sailing, being attended by friends of five passengers who are going out as missionaries, the Rev. Edwin C. Davis with his wife, Miss Mayme Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. James P. McLeod, all bound for India. The Rev. W. A. Parker of the Hancock Street church of the Disciples, Everett, conducted the services with the assistance of the Rev. Gilbert Harney of Boston and Dr. W. W. Douglas, McKenzie.

Eleven people were deported on the Cymric.

Her cargo includes 15,000 barrels of apples, 9000 bushels of wheat, 4600 bales of cotton, 700 bales of hemp, 600 bales of wool, 600 head of cattle, 350 tons of hay, 300 tons of provisions, 200 tons of oilcake, 200 tons of rags, and two refrigerators of fresh beef.

Among the first cabin passengers was: H. W. Metcalfe of Newcastle, Me., U. S. consul at Newcastle, Eng.; the Rev. and Mrs. Alexander McKenzie, D. D., Miss McKenzie of Cambridge, Dr. Amory Chapin of Readville, Mr. and Mrs. James Gentle, Miss Gentle, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Murray of Boston, Mrs. E. P. Cooper, H. P. Cooper, George Bagby, Mrs. J. ### SEVERAL LODGES OF ODD FELLOWS JOIN IN MEETING

SOUTH WEYMOUTH, Mass.—Wildley lodge, I. O. O. F., of this village, Crescent of East Weymouth, Old Colony of Hingham and Cohasset of Cohasset, held a union meeting in Fogg's opera house Monday evening.

The following officers of the Grand lodge of Massachusetts were present: Grand Master Horace M. Sargent of Haverhill; Deputy Grand Master George L. Marshall of Somerville; Grand Instructor William M. Webber of Boston and Grand Chaplain Joseph Belcher of Randolph.

Following a reception to the grand officers, a banquet was served after which Noble Grand John A. Hollis delivered an address of welcome. There was addresses by Grand Master Sargent, Grand Instructor Webber and visiting brethren.

DEPUTIES SURROUND DIETZ.

WINTER, Wis.—John Dietz of Cameron Dam, who for 10 years has resisted a lumber corporation's effort to dislodge him from his homestead which they claim is on the company's land, is surrounded today by deputy sheriffs. He has his wife and three children in his log cabin. Myra Dietz, a daughter, was wounded and a son of Dietz was arrested, in an affray with the authorities on Saturday.

EVENING SCHOOL REGISTRY BEGINS WITH NEW RECORD

An unprecedented rush for registration marked the opening last night of the Boston evening schools.

The largest number gathered at the English high school building, where the Central evening high school will be conducted, and 1200 registered. The Roxbury evening high school opened to the largest number in its history. At Charlestown in the high school building, Monument square, the registration figures will probably provide a new record. South Boston evening high had the largest first night registration in its history.

At all of the evening elementary schools there was a large registration. At the Boston evening industrial school in the Mechanic Arts high school 12 classes were organized. The school of design under Miss Weaver was also organized.

Registration will be continued at all of the schools during the week. The total registration will not be known for several days at least.

G. M. HOLBROOKE RELEASED.

G. M. Holbrooke, former manager for the Boston office of B. H. Scheffels & Co., was released Monday from the Charles street jail and the complaint against him withdrawn by the government.

LOSS OF SAILORS NOW BLAMED ON THEIR CONDITION

NEW YORK—The naval board of inquiry that is investigating Saturday night's Hudson river tragedy, in which it is now believed 25 sailors from the battleship New Hampshire were drowned while returning to the ship from shore leave, will in all probability report that the hilarious condition of the sailors was alone responsible for the overturning of the barge. The board was expected to complete its work today and at once send its findings to the navy department at Washington.

Fourteen of the missing sailors have been reported, which cuts down the list of probable victims to 25.

Midshipman Chevalier, the hero of the tragedy by reason of his work in rescuing a dozen of the men, will be the last man called before the board of inquiry. A medal of honor will likely be given him.

The Hudson river squadron began breaking up today, the Mississippi being the first to weigh anchor. The New Hampshire, Kansas and Louisiana will leave Friday.

GALILEO BRINGS IN CARGO.

The steamship Galileo, Captain Watson, of the Wilson line, arrived from Hull, Eng., Monday, with about 1464 tons of cargo for this port and 2288 tons for New York.

The Day in the Playhouse World

AT BOSTON THEATERS.

"The Dawn of Tomorrow" at the Shubert, "The Girl and the Drummer" at the Majestic, "The Crown Prince" at the Castle Square and "The Thief" at the Grand Opera House are new plays of the week in Boston. Other playhouses continued their attractions of last week.

Shubert—"The Dawn of a Tomorrow."

Miss Gertrude Elliott appeared Monday evening at the Shubert theater in the first Boston performance of "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," a drama in three acts by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett.

The theme of Mrs. Burnett's play is that things are never as bad as they seem; that there is always a tomorrow when things will be better if we hold to the best we know today. The central character of the play is Glad (short for Gladys Beverly Montmorency). Glad, according to the author, has "without education or any sort of Christian influence in her life, grasped the fact that there is a wonderful something which will help everybody—a power which can give her anything she asks for, if she only asks and keeps asking." Glad says: "It's a somethin' a woman told me about in the hospital. You ask and you receive. I've only just begun. It's out of the Bible. I'm trying to find out if the trick works."

Glad offers her doctrine to Sir Oliver Holt, a millionaire financier, who has been told by his physicians that he is a victim of mental trouble that will end fatally. Sir Oliver has sought out wretched Apple Blossom court in London slums, poorly clad, planning there to put an unnoticed end to his life. Sir Oliver's interest is aroused by Glad's cheerful philosophy and loses sight of his own troubles, according to the play, in helping the girl out of her multiplied difficulties. Chief of these is her concern for the fate of Dandy, a coster youth whom she hopes to marry. Dandy is accused of a homicide on circumstantial evidence and is being tracked by the police. The only person who can clear Dandy by an alibi is Oliver Holt, a dissolute nephew, by strange coincidence, of Sir Oliver. Oliver is Dandy's enemy for reasons of jealous resentment. Glad finally gets the truth from Oliver in a strong scene in which the reasons for her belief in the power of "arstin' and arstin'" are justified to her full satisfaction. Glad and Dandy return to Apple Blossom court, free now to be happy. Sir Oliver, we are told, has become cured through Glad of his desire to end his life, and plans to do what he can for London's poor, beginning with the neighbors of G.

Mrs. Burnett has protested against her work being called a religious play. She wishes it to be taken simply as an entertaining hope-giving theatrical document, and as such it has achieved a widespread success in this country and in England.

"The Dawn of a Tomorrow" is of the sort welcomed to our stage by those who long for a type of play with a predominant moral, written with the intent of uplifting and educating its auditors. Mrs. Burnett's play is outside the province of dramatic analysis since her style is that of a skillful story teller not working in accordance with dramatic principles, and it would be unfair to judge her work thereby.

Delightfully entertaining was Miss Miss Elliott's impersonation of the idealized cockney girl, Glad, a type always popular on the stage, as witness the success of "Merely Mary Ann" and the many plays from "Our Boys" and "Lord Chumley" to "The Prince Chap," in which cockney "slaves" are used with great effect in minor parts. Miss Elliott was completely convincing, being every moment the merry, imaginative waif, vigorous in gesture, sturdy in defence of the weak, calmly trustful in defending herself. Thrilling was the moment when she flung her arms high above her head and cried exultingly "I'm alive; I want something that will help me now, every day, for I'm alive!"

Mrs. Elliott's acting powers have matured wonderfully, yet with a wealth of acting devices at her command, she shows the real artist in her avoidance of frittering and pointless stage business. Miss Elliott was too busy being Glad. Never did she break the picture by any glimpse of her own personality as such. The audience responded sympathetically to her joyous laugh, her indomitable cheerfulness, and her simple trustfulness in good as always present.

The other personages of the play are less characters than they are types of varying social conditions discussing according to their lights the doctrines of Glad. As such they interest the audience constantly. Fuller Melish showed the muscular and vocal skill in the character of Sir Oliver. Scott Gattie was vigorous and likeable as Dandy. Sydney Booth could not make the stereotyped role of Sir Oliver's rakish nephew believable. Charles Garry walked stiffly as an inspector and vociferated. Indeed, everybody shouted much too much, either from first night agitation or mistaken stage management, for a theater as intimate as the Shubert. Jem and Feathers were finely done by Arthur Barry and Miss Anna Waite.

Fog was realistically represented at the opening of the second act in a setting that was a triumph for the stage carpenter and property man. Through a murky haze glimmered smoky street lamps, and the wretched corners of Apple Blossom court rang with coarse revelry and the roarings of brutal brawls. A large audience was closely attentive and showed unmixed pleasure in the matured art and ingratiating personality of Miss Elliott.

Castle Square—"The Crown Prince."

The John Craig players appeared Monday at the Castle Square theater in the first Boston performance of "The Crown Prince," a romantic play by George Broadhurst that for a time was presented by James K. Hackett.

The plot is one often used with success, as in Marshall's "A Royal Family." A crown prince and a princess betrothed in childhood meet, and love, neither knowing the identity of the other. There are adventures with highwaymen, a threatened duel and a balcony scene of young love.

The play is filled with scenes of pictorial romance and court splendor, and the players acted in the spirit of their material. Miss Young was a spirited young queen and made a lovely picture in several rich gowns. The costumes of the other ladies was up to high standard at the Castle Square. Mr. Craig made the prince at times a rather sheepish figure that was not without its reward in the approval of the audience. In the moments of swaggering romance Mr. Craig is, as always, at home. Messrs. Walker, Young and Hassell pleased, and Miss Curtis was a striking success as the countess. Al Roberts was amusing as a scared servant.

"The Girl and the Drummer."

Under this title was played at the Majestic theater Monday evening a musical adaptation of the well-known farce, "What Happened to Jones." We suspect the title to have been chosen with an eye to billboard purposes rather than to any idea of lucid characterization. For while there is a drummer there are several girls of equal interest with the particular one whom the drummer affects. In fact, there are four separate and distinct romances—farfetched, sophisticated, venerable and turtle-dove as to variety. So there is no lack of "heart interest," which a certain prominent authority cites as the one thing needful to bring popular success.

The piece has also another feature—its best of all—in the uproarious fun that lies not too deeply in the star role and which Mr. Cortell extracted with delicious aplomb of manner and spontaneity of facial expression. Managers must share with Caesar a dislike of those of a lean and hungry look, else why are all comedians cherubic men of portly presence? A gentlemen in the audience epigrammatically summed up the situation thus: "The fatter the funnier." Any who wish to learn how funny the "Girl and the Drummer" is must go to see it.

The music does not distract attention from the play, either by superlative beauty or utter badness, being rather colorless and conventional. But an undecurrent of sounds of sweet music to creep in the ear unobtrusively is not an unpleasant thing. An assertive score might have detracted from the jollity. Three of the songs went well, two of them partly through the low comedy devices of Miss Gold and Miss Mink, both of whom have talent sufficient to give performances of a more legitimate quality.

Miss Norma Brown as Minerva showed repose and Miss Flynn as her sister Marjorie was a capital ingenue. It would be pleasant to praise the choristers, but the present company is weak in this respect. Still, as critics are apt to seek perfectness, not with Diogenes' lantern, but with a microscope, it is best to minimize the absence of perfection and emphasize the pleasantness present in this show, which one could see twice with enjoyment.

Grand Opera House—"The Thief."

Sartorial extravagance and its consequences is depicted in no uncertain manner at the Grand Opera House Monday evening, where Henri Bernstein's intense play, "The Thief," holds the boards. While the theme of the play is unpleasant, and there is no vein of humor to relieve the strain of tense situations, the action holds the attention of the audience from the very start.

Miss Selma Herman, in the role of Marie, the wife who wishes to dress beautifully at any cost, not to gratify her pride, but to hold the love of her husband, depicted the character with great insight and skill. In the second act, when her fault is discovered, and she pleads with her husband to shield her, her acting shows both fire and pathos.

James A. Heenan, as Richard Voysin, the husband, displayed ability, except in the conclusion of the last act, when he quieted down a bit too much. His work was excellent in the strong scene in the second act, when his gesture and plan of expression were admirable.

Earl McLellan, as Fernand Lagardes, the young man accused of taking the money, although a trifle wooden at first, did a fine bit of acting in the last act, when he is banished by his father. John McFarlane, as the detective, M. Zamboult, was convincing. Lynn Osborne, in the role of the kind-hearted old millionaire, Raymond Lagardes, was excellent, and Helen Courtney, did full justice to the role of the motherly Madame Lagardes.

TELEPHONE RATE PROTEST REPORT GOES TO COMPANY

General Committee Opposing Proposed Changes Decides on Certain Matters to Be Recommended for Adoption

A sub-committee of citizens headed by Representative Charles A. Dean of Wakefield reported its recommendations to the general committee organized to protest against the proposed new rates of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company at a meeting at 18 Tremont street last night.

The sub-committee reported in favor of urging the telephone company to make the new rates of the company in the suburban exchanges optional with the subscriber and not compulsory. The committee also recommended that suburbs be maintained as one zone, as at present, and that the charge from all Boston exchanges to exchanges within the suburban zone be 5 cents instead of 10 cents as at present beyond the five-mile limit.

A committee was appointed to take the matter up with the telephone company, consisting of Representative Charles A. Dean, William M. McQuade, Dedham; James N. Folen, Norwood; W. O. Souther, Cohasset, and W. H. Rand of Newton.

An order was presented by Alderman George M. Cox last night in the Newton board of aldermen requesting the mayor and city solicitor to take the telephone matter up with the highway commission and protest against the discrimination made against certain sections of the city and request the commission to remedy them.

GERALD DU MAURIER. Plays an engaging character in George Paston's new play "Nobody's Daughter."

B. F. Keith's Vaudeville.

Frank Fogarty, "the Dublin minstrel," is the leading entertainer upon the bill this week at B. F. Keith's. He has a seemingly inexhaustible bundle of funny stories all told in the manner of a finished comedian that had the audience at the mercy of the entertainer. Another minstrel feature was the act of Russell and Smith in which all the regular elements of old-time minstrelsy are introduced. The skit is well done.

Belleaire Brothers offer an athletic act filled with skillful tumbling and feats of strength. Gordon Eldrid and company had a laughable farce and a neat dancing and singing act was presented by Hanson and Bijou. Meximo showed his skill upon the slack wire. A. White's "dancing jiggers" proved good eccentric entertainers and the Sherman enchantment pictures were shown for another week. The Bowman brothers in black and white sketch completed a bill of good quality and much variety.

Plays that Held Over.

A. E. Matthews, the noted English comedian, has entered upon the last week of his engagement at the Hollis in "Love Among the Lions," the bright farce in which a timid young man promises to wed his notoriety-seeking fiancée in a den of lions.

Douglas Fairbanks has begun the last week of his engagement at the Globe in "The Cub," the amusing melodramatic farce in which the star impersonates a green reporter among a group of Kentucky feudists, and having sentimental and exciting adventures.

Miss Marie Doro on Monday evening entered upon the second week of her engagement at the Park in William Gillette's new play, "Electricity," in which the star is shown as having amusing adventures as a multi-millionaire's daughter who has taken up militant socialism.

John Barrymore is evidently here for a good part of the season in "The Fortune Hunter," in view of the undoubted success the play is having here. The play abounds in racy types of country life and the action is one long laugh-provoker.

Miss Julia Sanderson has fascinated Bostonians by her acting, singing and dancing in the principal feminine role in "The Arcadians" at the Colonial. The others are all of the best in their lines, too, and the charming music and wit of the piece make it a delight.

Boston Notes.

"Girls," a New York summer roof garden musical show, is visible at the Boston theater.

Clyde Fitch's comedy, "Girls," will be the attraction next week at the Castle Square theater.

"The Lily," with Nance O'Neil and Charles Cartwright in the principal roles, will have its first performance in this city at the Hollis Street theater next Monday evening.

Mail orders are being received at the Majestic theater for the engagement of "The Chocolate Soldier," which comes to Boston Oct. 17.

"Annie Laurie," a romantic drama by M. Douglas Platter, comes to the Globe next Monday evening with Miss Lillian Bacon in the title role.

THE DRAMA IN LONDON.

(Special to The Monitor.)

"Nobody's Daughter," by George Paston. LONDON—Mrs. Frampton and Colonel Torrens have made what is called a "big mistake." This happened many years ago, and both have since contracted most happy marriages. Their daughter, Honora May, however, serves to remind them of what Mrs. Frampton would regard as the folly of inexperienced youth, and what Christine Grant, who was once in the service of Mrs. Frampton's family, would prefer to call by a franker name. Christine, who has had the bringing up of Honora, keeps a little village shop in Brambleside, and here the daughter of Colonel Torrens and Mrs. Frampton has lived and been educated after a fashion. "I've always brought her up as a lady," the worthy Christine protests, "she's had her bath every morning." The fact that Honora has been allowed to occupy this distinctly enigmatic position is somewhat weakly accounted for on the ground that she was a delicate child. It is perhaps not an entirely unnatural coincidence that Colonel Torrens' regiment happens to be quartered near where Mr. and Mrs. Frampton are living; anyway for dramatic purposes the coincidence is distinctly useful.

Honora May, at the time the play commences, is nineteen; and Colonel Torrens and Mrs. Frampton visit the cottage at Brambleside to propose that their daughter should go and live with a family and see something of people in her own class of life. Had Christine any objection? Christine is a Calvinist, of a dour type, who probably regards her really tender affection for the child she has brought up as a weakness. But the good woman thinks this scheme of the parents right as far as it goes, and that is enough for her. The opposition, however, comes from Honora herself. She does not want to go to a "family"; she wants real relations like other girls; and besides she has a secret. This secret, of course, is that she is engaged to a young mechanic, Will Leonard by name. The parents are greatly distressed, but what is to be done? Then Christine, who is as opposed as any one to her child marrying a workman, threatens to tell Mr. Frampton the whole story if Honora is not taken to her mother's home. Mrs. Frampton, failing to turn Christine from her purpose, in great fear, makes up her mind to the "risk." Honora is to be introduced as Colonel Torrens' ward, and the old lies are to be told and stuck by. Honora, and her rough but intelligent lover, agree on their side that, with the exception of a single occasion, they will neither see nor write to one another for six months. "You'll change," the young man gloomily prognosticates, "when you get away among the swells." The curtain descends on Honora sobbing in the arms of her nurse, who looks over the girl's shoulder with something like triumphant hate at the mother who has at last been compelled to do her duty by her own child.

It is unnecessary to follow in detail the story. The exceedingly "thin" lies are of course seen through. Honora expresses a desire for relations, and Mr. Frampton, the most good-natured of men, undertakes to satisfy her "moral taste," and find out who, and where they are, with the inevitable result. Then Mr. Frampton, the best of fellows with the sweetest nature in the world, becomes, as often happens, equally severe with his self-indulgent wife. This scene is a really difficult one for the actor. Gerald Du Maurier has "fooled" in his inimitable manner through the whole of the second act. Mrs. Frampton, bent on making her daughter look nice, has sent for hats of all shapes and sizes, and Du Maurier puts them on himself, and talks an endless stream of engaging "sonse" to "John," says his wife, "will always be a boy." Then, in a moment, he is obliged to change from being a light-hearted, diletante detective, to a furiously outraged husband, shouting "liar" over the prostrate form of his wife. That Du Maurier carried this piece of difficult acting through as he did, is yet another proof, if one were wanted, of his ability as an actor. But Du Maurier has been fortunate enough to get an exceptional cast. Sydney Valentine, as Colonel Torrens, plays, as he always does, with his usual assurance; while Miss Braithwaite, in the by no means easy role of Mrs. Frampton, brings out the pleasure-loving, easy going, and entirely "sweet" character of the woman, who is compelled to see something of Christine Grant's inexorable theology. The Calvinist nurse, fearless, truthful to the very letter, and a self-conscious martyr to duty, serves as an excellent foil to Mrs. Frampton. "Have you read your chapter?" she anxiously asks Honora; and then, receiving a very positive no, she adds with much gentleness: "Ah, you were always a worldling at heart like your mother." This most effective part was admirably played by Miss Mary Rorke.

In the fourth act there is a general reconciliation. Mrs. Torrens tells her husband that she knew almost at once that Honora was his child, and in a speech that sounds a little like platform oratory from a suffragette rostrum, lets John Frampton know what she thinks of his point of view. Granted his wife had lied to him and neglected her child, the social order of things had made truth telling anything but an easy matter for a woman in such circumstances. Miss Honrietta Watson gives this difficult speech very well indeed, and makes the comparatively small part of Mrs. Torrens stand right out in the play.

So all ends as well as can be expected. Honora, having refused an eligible young "fyer" in the third act, goes off to Sydney with her mechanic; and John Frampton and his wife in a scene played with much feeling bring down the curtain happily enough.

George Paston has written a play that holds the attention of the audience from start to finish, and is likely to hold it for is a masterpiece. All that the past has accomplished in the production of an artistic piano is embodied in the Mason & Hamlin. Then one thing more is added, the most important of all, which no other piano has or can have—the Mason & Hamlin Tension Resonator, the only important advance in piano construction in the last twenty-five years.

A technical description of this epoch-making discovery from The Scientific American of Oct. 11, 1902, will be mailed upon application.

several months to come. The dialogue is thoroughly good, easy and amusing, though it makes no claim to be witty; and the characters, without being at all subtle, are living, breathing people. There is, nevertheless, a good deal in the play that is decidedly theatrical, and its effects are often rather too obvious. That it sustains the interest as it does, is because it is human. The ideas too that are expressed are those that are very much in vogue, and find a sympathetic echo in the audience. Also there is a kindly feeling for each character, and an underlying sense of justice and rectitude that deals out pretty fair measure to everybody.

Of the actors that have not been mentioned, it should be said that Miss Rosalie Toller makes Honora a most charming and outspoken young lady; and that Will Leonard, played by Marsh Allen, is such a thoroughly good fellow that the audience entirely indorse Miss Honora's opinion. In short, the play has the advantage of being excellently interpreted throughout.

Frank Curzon and Gerald Du Maurier have started their new management with an undoubted success.

Sarah Bernhardt at Coliseum.

Mme. Bernhardt has appeared for the first time in vaudeville at the Coliseum, the largest house in London. It is unnecessary to say that the great tragedienne was received with the enthusiasm that has come to be associated with her name. That she is popular in the role of the "Duke de Reichstadt" is evident from the fact that she is often seen in it, but even granting the "eaglet" was not very masculine, Mme. Bernhardt's characteristics are essentially feminine. The part, however, presents some opportunities for the actress, and that is, after all, what the audience want and expect from the great Sarah. Mme. Bernhardt, too, has told a representative of the Morning Post that she has chosen this particular play because Rostand is now the great national poet of France, and she desires his work to be known all over the world.

In this interview Sarah Bernhardt has much to say that is of interest both to America and England. On the twenty-second of October she sails for New York to fulfill an eight months' engagement in the United States. On her return to Paris she will produce at her own theater a rewritten version by M. Rostand of his "Princess Lointaine." Then will follow Victor Hugo's "Lucrece Borgia," and then again a new play by Rostand.

Speaking of Coquelin, Mme. Bernhardt says: "I think it will be a long time before we see his like again. He was a charming man, and he was also a great comedian, though, in my opinion, he was not a great artist. Irving was an actor I call a great artist. He had the temperament of genius. Coquelin had a prodigious memory. My memory is not good at all. I have to reread a part and study it again and again if I have not played in it for some time." Mme. Bernhardt concludes by saying of Coquelin: "He was indeed a loss to the French stage."

GOLD OF ALASKA SHOWS DECREASE

SEATTLE, Wash.—The first estimate of the season's gold output from Alaska, made by the Alaska Yukon Magazine, is that there will be a reduction of more than $5,000,000 from last year's output of $20,500,000. The estimate is $15,000,000.

The chief falling off is in the Fairbanks district. A considerable decrease in the Nome output is also anticipated.

A committee composed of the Fathers and Mothers Club is planning a house warming at the farm of the club in Grove street, Reading, Oct. 26, from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m.

During the summer 75 children have been cared for, testing the resources of the farm to the utmost, but the house will be open all winter for school children.

[COPY OF LETTER JUST RECEIVED]

Boston Sept 6 1910

Dear Sirs—Having attended to our cleaning work for so many years it is fitting that some acknowledgment should be made to you of the continued satisfaction and pleasure which your service has given. It has been the endeavor to supply you with good material and the results have been most surprising. The goods as returned being almost equal to new even after long use and almost discarded. We cannot recall a single instance of other than the most gratifying outcome and our confidence is shown by uninterrupted business and suggestions to our friends.

FASHIONS AND THE HOUSEHOLD

HOME HELPS

FLOORS which are to be stained should be first prepared by painting with a very thin coating of size evenly applied.

Drawers that will not run easily should have the bottoms and sides rubbed with dry yellow soap.

To prevent jams and jellies from grain- ing add a teaspoonful of cream of tar- tar to every gallon.

When frying mush dip slices first in white of egg. This makes them crisp.

If the window cords are wiped off oc- casionally with an oiled cloth they will last much longer.

One of the newest curtains is made of green linen crash applied with a heavy patterned copper-colored cluny lace.

What is left of a roast of meat will keep moist if wrapped in a piece of linen or waxed paper.

FASHION BITS

The vogue of tricot—that is, knitted coats, caps, skirts and sweaters—will evidently be continued this year, as their cozy durability is giving them suf- ficient favor for a second season.

Broad black braids are in demand by garment makers, and will be seen on separate coats and on suits of fabrics that require special ornamentation.

Ruffles of the dress goods, seven or eight inches wide and only just full enough to prevent "hooping," are fa- vored again.

Tosca net, black plaided, with threads in Scotch colors and designs, will be much used in dressy waists.

Jabots in simple plaited apron style are shown, while the fancier varieties in cascade and one-sided effects are to be had in every conceivable modifica- tion.

This year's trimmings will consist largely of bandings, all-overs, garnitures and tunics of net embroidered in silk and encrusted with beads.

Girl's Apron

Aprons that really cover the dress are what active girls require. This one can be made simply and plainly, as in this case, or with square neck, without sleeves and with- out pockets, as shown in the small view. It is simple and easily made. It is practical and protective. It is in every way suited to the hours of play. Gingham, chambray, linen and a great many of the inex- pensive wash fabrics are appropriate for the apron with sleeves, lawns and the like for the one made as shown in the back view.

The apron is made with fronts and backs, when high neck is used the collar is joined to the edge. The sleeves are moderately full, and finished with straight bands.

The quantity of material required for 12-year size is 5 yards 24 or 27, or 3½ yards 30 inches wide.

The pattern 6775 is cut in sizes for girls of 8, 10, 12 and 14 years of age, and can be had at any May Manton agency or will be sent by mail. Address 132 East Twenty-third street, New York, or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

Hanging Up Thin Waists

Did you ever try hanging up thin waists, dresses and petticoats in the closet with large safety pins? Fasten the pin in a part of the garment where the one pinhole will not show and hang the pin on the closet hook. This is especially good when closet room is scarce or when away from home and there is fear that the closet hooks may rust or stain the garment.

A small safety pin is better than a tape needle for drawing a ribbon through beading. Simply fasten the pin through the end of the ribbon or tape and proceed as usual with no fear that your needle will become unthreaded when your tape is half way through.

Striped and Plain

Gowns composed of a striped and a plain material are not this year an evi- dence of remodeling, for many of the most fashionable of the cloth frocks are so developed. The fact remains, how- ever, that this affords an opportunity for using an old gown to advantage.

Wide Band on Tunic

There will be little difficulty, even though you are short, in finishing the bottom of your tunic or gown with a wide band if you make it of the same material. It is the contrasting color that gives a cut-off look.

BOSTON SCHOOL FOR SALESWOMEN A SUCCESS

Big stores and employees profit by it and other cities are adopting the idea.

SALESWOMEN IN CLASS LISTENING TO LECTURE.

Receiving practical instruction in store department and business efficiency; need of courtesy and close attention to cus- tomer emphasized.

THE courtesy and efficiency of the saleswomen of Boston have been the subject of comment among visitors to the city. They have ranked it above any they have experienced elsewhere, praise that is by no means empty, as many of them are travelers whose jour- neys have included the circuit of the world. This is ascribed to the work of the Union School for Saleswomen, conducted under the auspices of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, the only one of its kind in the world—that is, practically speaking, for recently others have been started in Providence and San Francisco using this as a model, and several large depart- ment stores are taking up the work for their own employees.

There have been schools of salesman- ship for some years past, but they have devoted themselves to the study of com- modities, while in this the first thought is the actual responsibility of selling, service to the customer, the personal relationship of the one who sells to the one who buys, a feature which has been generally overlooked by all save the purchaser herself.

Many elements enter into it. Courtesy is the keynote. The girls are taught that there is no better ammunition than cour- tesy. They are to take the part of hosts, with the customer as their guest, to whom they owe their undivided atten- tion, consideration and help. Their per- sonal appearance, cleanliness, neatness and good taste in dress are all dwelt upon. They are given instruction in the technical details of their work, and the reason why careful attention to them is necessary is impressed upon them.

In connection with this and through the whole of it the personal relations between the saleswoman and the cus- tomer are emphasized. The saleswoman is taught how to approach a customer, the very expression her face should wear, how to show goods, the impor- tance of trifles, etc. Every imaginable emergency and condition is brought up to her to meet any and all kinds of people in all frames of mind. This is done not theoretically, but practically. There is a real counter or table with a supply of real articles on it, in this in- stance aprons. A customer comes in, cross from the crush, stumbling and flustered. The saleswoman, who is one of the students, goes through her part as she would in the store. Afterward she herself is given opportunity to criti- cize her own work, then her classmates are called upon to dissect, pointing out the strong and the weak points and how the latter can be remedied. They will often bring out how more interest could have been taken in the purchase, a greater degree of helpfulness expressed, the thought being always that in con- sulting the needs of the customer the store itself is receiving the highest service.

There are practical lessons in textiles, color and design, the object being to give the saleswoman an intelligent under- standing of the goods she handles, which in itself is necessary for efficient ser- vice, and also to aid the customer in the combination of textures, colors and designs, what makes a good design for a given purpose and why. Following their work with text-books, pencils and lectures they are given such work as frequently comes to them in the store, matching colors in different fabrics, combinations of color and fabrics, suitable trimmings, etc., and are taught to help the woman with a little money to spend it to the best advantage.

The school originated with Mrs. Lu- cinda W. Prince and is conducted by her. Mrs. Prince has been associated with young saleswomen for a number of years and had been impressed with their gen- eral indifference to their work, many of the hardships which they underwent and their attitude of drudging through the day that they might get the dollar to go home at night and begin to live. They had no buoyancy in their work, no spring, and after years of service many of them were getting the same small wages they received in the beginning, and she was obliged to confess they were worth no more.

There was a remedy, she was sure, and she set herself to discover it. The work must be made interesting to the girls; they must respect it and develop it. In order to bring this out she must get down to fundamentals, beginning not with theory but with the work itself. When she started in with it five years ago and sought the cooperation of the stores they would have nothing to do with it. After hard labor, one agreed to assist. The school had a hard struggle at first, but now at the beginning of the sixth year it has 300 graduates in this city alone and five large local stores are sending their new employees to this school for three hours each day in the week for three months, which consti- tutes the school course, and paying them full wages. In other ways also they are assisting in the work of the school, members of the firms and the more important persons in their employ giving lectures and talks in the school and advising as to its management.

The demand from stores for the train- ing of their clerks is so great teachers are being trained for this particular pur- pose. A merchant in a western city has sent his daughter here to study the course. A young woman who has been engaged in library work is now fitting herself for salesmanship. All this proves that this work which has not previously ranked as well as most other lines is being lifted to a higher basis by the greater efficiency of those engaged in it, is commanding better wages and attract- ing a higher class of applicants.

As Mrs. Prince puts it, "The whole mental attitude of the girls is changed. Instead of a mere means of getting an indifferent livelihood, they are finding they are a live part in the real work of the world. They are not fillers-in, but contributing substantial help to the betterment of humanity. They are developing their full powers in the hap- piest way and are finding the joy of ex- pression through their work."

The practicability of the school has been proved to such an extent that the school committee now has under advisement the question of adding such a course to its continuation schools, adapt- ing it to the younger children.

MENDING TINWARE YOURSELF

WE hear much of the "little leaks" in kitchen economy which make the "big hole" in the household ex- penses. One of these little things is the mending of the numerous articles of tinware in use in the kitchen, a sim- ple process which is often attended with a great deal of inconvenience when the article must be sent from home for mending, but which the cook or house- keeper can easily accomplish with a lit- tle practice.

Buy 5 cents' worth of muriatic acid, and put into it all the zinc it will dissolve. Scraps of zinc may probably be secured from the oilshop.

Purchase 10 cents' worth of hard solder. Whenever a leak makes its ap- pearance in any of the tinware, scrape off any rust that may be round it, then drop some of the acid upon it to clean it; cut off a piece of the soldering and place it upon the hole, and hold the ves- sel over a burning lamp, or any flame where the leak may be exposed to heat, until the solder melts and spreads enough to cover the hole; then remove and hold in position until the solder cools enough to harden.

If it is necessary to mend any part of the tinware that cannot be exposed to the flame or stove heat, have an iron spoon in which to melt the solder; treat the leak in the same manner as to cleaning and applying the acid; have a poker made hot and hold it on the leak until the parts around are heated, and then pour the solder on, says the Phila- delphia Times.

Our grandmothers used to prevent the wearing of the bottoms of pans and kettles by putting legs of pewter on them, and we could make our tinware last much longer by putting legs of solder on all that is not to be used on the stove. All that is necessary is to clean a place with the acid, melt some solder in a spoon, and pour it on slowly, letting it harden until the little knobs or legs are large enough to be service- able.

The exhibition of the United Shoe Machinery Company at Mechanics Build- ing, Huntington Ave., Boston, represents the triumph of the inventive gen- ius of America. The dreams of a hundred inventors, the best thoughts of more than a thousand minds, the skill of many thousand workmen, and the investment of millions of dollars, are concen- trated in the "Goodyear Welt" machinery. Though created by men and put together, part by part, by human hands, each machine of the "Goodyear Welt System" is more accurate, sure, efficient, and more productive than half a hundred workmen. They are the mechanical marvels of our day.

The shoe industry has become one of the most important of the industries of the United States since the development of the "Goodyear Welt System" of making shoes. The workman has become a master of machin- ery. His hands turn on the power and release it when the machine, more accurate than the human hand, never-tiring, always-the-same, has completed its work.

Every man and woman in New England should see the exhibition of the United Shoe Machinery Company at the Me- chanics Fair, beginning Monday, October 3d. It is an educational exhibit that every person who buys shoes should see. Go and see it for yourself.

The Thing To Remember Is that you can detect the imitation of the "Goodyear Welt" by a "sock" lining. Lift it up at the shank of the shoes. If there are tack points and stitches underneath it, the shoe is not a "Goodyear Welt." If you want the best in construction

TRIED RECIPES

TOMATO BISQUE.

Melt a quarter cupful butter, add two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped onion, cook five minutes; then add three table- spoonfuls of flour, two pints of milk, one and a half teaspoonfuls of salt, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, four cloves, and a very little red pepper and celery salt; then cook in a double boiler for 20 minutes. Cook one can of toma- toes, rub them through a sieve and add a quarter of a teaspoonful of baking soda. Combine the mixture and strain. Serve immediately.

EGGPLANT FRITTERS.

Pare and slice the eggplant and quar- ter the slices. Scald in salted water for five minutes. Drain and wipe dry. Make a batter in the proportion of one egg to each quarter cup flour, rubbed smooth in sweet milk, half teaspoonful melted but- ter and pepper and salt to taste. Beat well and no baking powder will be re- quired. Flour each piece of eggplant, roll over and over in the batter, which must be right firm but not stiff, and fry in hot lard that will nearly cover them. These are especially fine. The flour acts as a coating and the eggplant retains its juices, so that the fritter remains crisp for a long time.

POTTED VEAL.

Cut one pound of veal into small pieces and cook it very slowly until perfectly tender in as little water as possible. When done, drain off the liquor and let the veal dry in a cool oven. Look it over well to be sure there are no bits of gristle or skin, and put it twice through a meat chopper. Then put it into a bowl with two ounces of softened butter, mix well and pound to a smooth paste. Add one teaspoonful of grated lemon peel, one teaspoonful of salt, a generous pinch of powdered mace, a few grains of cayenne and half a teaspoonful of white pepper. Work the seasoning well through, then press into small pots, and when it is perfectly cold run a little melted butter over the top and cover tightly.

BROILED COLD CHICKEN.

Here is a good way to vary the monot- ony of cold fowl, whether boiled or roasted: Take the half or quarter which has not been cut into and rub it over with a marinade of two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and one lemon juice. Put the fowl between two plates and set aside for three hours. Then rub the oil and lemon juice well into it, dip in egg and then in fine toaster crumbs; set on the ice for an hour, and broil over a me- dium hot fire, turning often. Make a gravy of melted butter with chopped parsley and a few drops of lemon juice and pour over the dish.

QUINCE MARMALADE.

Take ripe quinces, cut them into small pieces, put them in sufficient water to cover them, and let them cook till they can be mashed with a spoon, or a good thing to use is a wooden potato masher. When well mashed in the water, pour in the sugar, allowing three fourths of a pound for every pound of fruit. Cook until it assumes a bright red color. Test by pouring on a saucer just sufficient to see if it will jelly, when it reaches this degree of consistency, it is done. When cold it will be quite solid.

ARRANGING COURSE FOR CHICAGO AERIAL FLIGHT TO NEW YORK

Glenn Curtiss Fixing up a Smudge Fire Line to Guide
Aeronauts Along Railroad Tracks.

CURRENTS A STUDY

CHICAGO—Signals for aerial mariners will be arranged for this week by Glenn Curtiss for the Chicago-New York aeroplane race, which will begin next Saturday for $30,000 in prizes.

Mr. Curtiss left for Cleveland to arrange relay stations for the fliers, and to obtain aid from railway officials whose tracks parallel the proposed line of flight, in mapping out the course. Smudges giving out thick, black smoke by day and a dull red glow in the evening at railroad crossings or branches to acquaint the sky sailors of the rights of way are now being planned for, and in the open country flags will be used.

A pathfinder automobile, in charge of Jerome S. Fanciulli, Mr. Curtiss' business manager, left here this morning to visit the various stopping points selected by the aviators and make arrangements for the fliers.

The stops have been settled on finally, those marked with a star being selected only tentatively:

Miles.	Miles.
Chicago, Ill. ....	Buffalo, N. Y. ....
Lafayette, Ind. ....	Rochester, N. Y. ....
Elkhart, Ind. ....	Clyde, N. Y. ....
Waterloo, Ind. ....	Syracuse, N. Y. ....
Stratford, Ind. ....	Oneida, N. Y. ....
Toledo, Ohio ....	Utica, N. Y. ....
Norwalk, Ohio ....	Pelham, N. Y. ....
Elmira, Ohio ....	Schenectady, N. Y. ....
Cleveland, Ohio ....	Albany, N. Y. ....
Palmsville, Ohio ....	Hudson, N. Y. ....
Conneaut, Ohio ....	Poughkeepsie, N. Y. ....
Brie, Pa. ....	Peekskill, N. Y. ....
Brooklyn, N. Y. ....	New York, N. Y. ....

The selection of this schedule was the combined work of the contestants.

The race is to be one long battle with the fall winds, says Glenn Curtiss, who has seen more of the course. It is covered than any other aeroplanist competing, and already holds two previous long distance flight records—from Albany to New York and from Cleveland to Cedar Point.

BEST WIRELESS RECORD MADE IS NOW 5600 MILES

NEW YORK—The Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company has received word from its London station that Mr. Marconi, who is near Buenos Aires, had received messages at that point from Glace Bay, N. S., and from Clifden, Ireland.

These two points are about equidistant from Argentina and it is estimated that the new record is about 5600 miles. The Marconi people say that this far exceeds their best previous record.

The United States battleship Tennessee more than a year ago picked up a message from San Francisco 4580 miles away. In November, 1909, the Pacific Mail steamship Korea sent a message to the United Wireless station at San Francisco from a point at sea 3300 miles to the eastward and then repeated the performance when she had reached a point 4720 miles east of San Francisco. The Marconi company believes that the messages received by Mr. Marconi in Argentina establish a new record.

QUINCY EVENING SCHOOLS OPENED WITH A BIG LIST

QUINCY, Mass.—The evening schools opened Monday evening, with a large attendance. The sessions will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings in the Adams, Willard and high schools. At the first two named schools, the pupils will be instructed in reading, spelling and writing. At the high school, there will be classes in cooking, sewing, commercial subjects, civil service preparation and mechanical and free hand drawing.

The teachers are as follows:
Adams school—Arthur T. Townsend, George Holte, Alice T. Clark and Jennie F. Griffin; Willard school—David H. Goodspeed, Otto Anderson, Frances C. Sullivan, Elizabeth Sullivan; high school—Sarah C. Ames, Cooking; Arthur A. Ray and Lillian Newman, drawing; Warren C. Robinson, civil service.

LESS PUBLICITY IN SCHOOLS ASKED

The first autumnal meeting of the Boston Baptist Social Union, in Ford hall last evening, brought out nearly 400 men to listen to a discussion of the subject of "Education," Prof. Alfred W. Anthony of Bates College speaking of its application to the individual, and President William H. P. Faunce of Brown University giving a view of present tendencies.

Dr. Anthony is soon to sail with Secretary Thomas S. Barbour of the Baptist Foreign Missionary Society for a visit to missions in India.

"Public schools," said Professor Anthony, "have too much publicity, and the curtain of privacy should be drawn upon them for the good of the young minds which need the quiet which comes of seclusion."

CAPT. MUIR FOR SUB-TREASURY.

WASHINGTON—Capt. John G. Muir of the marine corps, a hero of the dash to Peking in 1900, has been appointed cashier in the sub-treasury in Philadelphia.

FIRE IN NEW YORK LUMBER DISTRICT BURNS FOR HOURS

NEW YORK—Fire burned over an area of nearly three acres early last night in the lumber yard, factory and stable district in Eleventh avenue, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, causing damage estimated at $1,500,000. For nearly three hours the flames were beyond control of the fire department.

The fire started in the lumber yard of Moore Brothers, Eleventh avenue and Twenty-fourth street, quickly destroyed it and soon ignited the kindling wood factory of Clark & Wilkins which was likewise burned.

Besides these structures, there were either destroyed or damaged: Six-story factory of the New York Metal Ceiling Company, stable and storehouse of James J. Duffy, contractor; the Pennsylvania hotel, a three-story structure; warehouse of the United States Express Company; vacant two-story building of the Metropolitan Iron & Steel Company; four-story factory of the Atlas Metal Bed Company.

For a while the flames threatened the Baltimore & Ohio freight yards, and the specialty department of the Standard Oil Company, but hard work checked the blaze in time.

FORTY-SEVEN UNITED STATES CITIES SHOW ABOVE 100,000 MARK

WASHINGTON—Facts in the growth of United States cities in the last 10 years are disclosed in the latest bulletin, a recapitulation of the census bureau.

A table is given which is a complete roll of the 38 cities which had in 1900 a population of 100,000 or more, to which have been added nine cities—Albany, N. Y., Atlanta, Ga., Birmingham, Ala., Bridgeport, Conn., Cambridge, Mass., Dayton, O., Grand Rapids, Mich., Lowell, Mass., and Richmond, Va., which have risen above the 100,000 limit since 1900. There are doubtless some others which will be found to have passed this mark when the count is completed.

During the last two decades there has been no change in the rank of the five largest cities. Here are the eight largest cities:

SUPREME COURT JUSTICES MAKE READY FOR TERM

WASHINGTON—Associate Justices Harlan, Lurton and McKenna have arrived in Washington, the advance guard of the supreme court of the United States, which will convene next Monday for the opening session of the October term of the supreme court.

REPORT PLEASES ANDREW SQUARE

The Andrew Square Improvement Association is satisfied with the progress that has been made for better transportation facilities for its locality and the report of the committee on transportation made Monday evening at the regular meeting of the association was received with gratification.

C. P. Flynn, for the committee on transportation made a favorable report regarding Southampton street. He called attention to the assurances in writing received from the Boston Elevated Railway Company that it would share in the cost of paving and would lay tracks over to Roxbury if the city provided for its share of the work.

Mr. Flynn reported regarding the intention of the schoolhouse commissioners to wire the John A. Andrew school for electricity.

The association took immediate action on procuring a large flaming ark light in Andrew square and a vote of protest against many of the features of the proposed new rate schedule for telephone users.

CITY POSTOFFICE CHIEF RETURNS

Postmaster Edward C. Mansfield, who has been in attendance at the annual convention of the first-class postmasters of the country at Richmond, Va., returned to his desk at the Federal building today. Mr. Mansfield was accompanied by Postmaster Fisher and wife of Paducah, Ky., on a short visit and investigation of the Boston postal system, which is conceded to be one of the best regulated offices in the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Fisher were shown over the federal building and were favorably impressed. Mr. Mansfield read a paper entitled "The Efficiency Record System" at the convention.

REMARKABLE EXODUS OF CONGRESSMEN IS SHOWN BY RETURNS

WASHINGTON—Returns from primary elections and conventions to date throughout the country make the remarkable showing that 78 members of the present Congress have retired or failed of a renomination.

No such exodus has occurred from the roster of Congress since the memorable opposition to the Republicans after the passage of the McKinley tariff bill in 1890.

The list of senators and representatives of the present congress who will not be in the next Congress is as follows:
Alabama—William B. Craig, retired.
Arkansas—Charles C. Reed, retired; R. Minor Wallace, defeated.

California—Senator Frank P. Flint, retired; D. E. McKinlay and James McLachlan, defeated.

Connecticut—N. D. Sperry, retired.

Florida—Senator J. P. Tallaferra, defeated.

Georgia—L. F. Livingston and William M. Howard, defeated.

Idaho—T. R. Hamer, defeated.

Illinois—H. S. Boutell, defeated and H. M. Snapp and F. O. Lowden, retired.

Iowa—A. F. Dawson and W. D. Jamieson, retired; J. A. T. Hull, defeated.

Kansas—C. F. Scott, J. M. Miller, W. A. Calderhead and W. A. Reeder, defeated.

Maryland—John Kronmiller, S. E. Mudd, and G. A. Pearce, retired.

Massachusetts—C. F. Tirrell, deceased; J. A. Keliher and Joseph F. O'Connell, defeated; Eugene N. Foss, retired.

Michigan—Senator J. C. Burrows and Washington Gardner, defeated; C. E. Townsend, retired from the House and nominated for the Senate.

Minnesota—James A. Tawney, defeated.

Mississippi—Senator H. D. Money, retired; Thomas Spight and A. M. Byrd, defeated.

Missouri—Senator William Warner, retired.

Nebraska—G. M. Hitchcock and E. H. Hinshaw, retired; Hitchcock nominated for the Senate by the Democrats.

Nevada—G. A. Bartlett, retired.

New Jersey—C. N. Fowler, defeated.

New York—J. Van V. Olcott, defeated; Charles L. Knapp and James S. Havens, retired.

North Carolina—John M. Morehead, retired.

North Dakota—Senator William E. Purcell and A. J. Gronna, retired; Gronna has been nominated for the Senate by the Republicans.

Ohio—Ralph D. Cole, defeated.

Oregon—William R. Ellis, defeated.

Pennsylvania—T. D. Nichols, H. W. Palmer, John M. Reynolds, C. F. Barclay, G. F. Huff, A. F. Cooper and J. K. Tener, retired; A. B. Garner, N. P. Wheeler and W. H. Graham, defeated; Tener nominated for Governor by the Republicans.

Rhode Island—Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, retired.

South Carolina—James O. Patterson, defeated.

Tennessee—W. P. Brownlow, deceased.

Texas—Gordon Russell, resigned; O. W. Gillespie, defeated.

Virginia—Senator John W. Daniel, deceased; H. L. Maynard, defeated.

Meets Mr. Stimson

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.—Colonel Roosevelt talked politics for a time Monday with Henry L. Stimson, Republican candidate for Governor, sped as parting guests Mr. and Mrs. Longworth, and in the afternoon took an automobile ride to visit nearby relatives.

New Party Chairmen

NEW YORK—It was decided Monday afternoon by the Republican leaders that Ezra P. Prentice would be named as the chairman of the Republican state committee to succeed Timothy L. Woodruff. Mr. Prentice is a lawyer and has been for some time past the deputy in charge of the attorney-general's office in New York city.

Mr. Roosevelt, it is understood, was desirous of having Herbert Parsons named as the successor of Mr. Woodruff.

CITY EMPLOYEE PARADE GIVEN UP

The parade of the city employees which was planned to be a feature of the "Boston 1915" celebration in this city next month has been given up, according to an announcement made by Mayor Fitzgerald at the meeting of the city council and heads of city departments, held in the old aldermanic chamber late Monday.

The mayor further announced that the inspection of Boston's city departments, in connection with the 1915 movement, would be made by the mayors of the cities of metropolitan Boston on the afternoon of Friday, Nov. 11.

ARLINGTON PUPIL ENROLMENT GAIN IS 125 THIS YEAR

Total Registration For Town is 2229 and High School Reports That 95 Are Without Seats.

ARLINGTON—The enrolment of pupils in the schools of this town is 2229, or a gain of 125 over last year's registration.

The schools report as follows: High school 387, Crosby school 402, Cutter school 301, Locke school 510, Russell school 480, Parmenter school 149. The most crowded schools are the high, the Crosby and the Locke.

The high school has 95 more pupils than there are seats, while the lower grades of the Crosby school are so large that half the class attends in the morning and the rest in the afternoon. On account of this crowded condition, a new teacher has been necessary. In order to relieve the congestion, the school has been put into condition to accommodate the ninth grade, which is taught by Miss Allyn.

The school committee has voted to install sanitary drinking fountains in all the schools and the work is already begun.

Four typewriters have been added to the commercial department in the high school because of the large number of pupils who have elected this course. This year there are 136 taking the commercial course. The course fits a pupil for a position when he graduates.

A new constitution for the athletic association providing for the government of all athletics of the school was adopted by the committee.

CRANBERRY HAND PICKING NEAR END

MIDDLEBORO—The handpicking on the cranberry bogs in the towns in this region is nearly completed for the season. This week will mark the end of it on most of the bogs. There will be a little more machine picking.

The growers report that the crop is considerably below what was expected. The continued warm weather and the shipping of unripe fruit have caused prices to be lower than usual. In some towns many of the school children have been employed picking cranberries on the bogs. In Carver the public schools delay sessions until the close of the picking season. The schools in Carver opened yesterday for the season.

PRESIDENT TAFT PRESSES BUTTON

BEVERLY, Mass.—President Taft Monday night at 11 o'clock pressed a button which set the machinery in motion and formally opened the dry farming congress at Spokane, Wash.

When it was 11 o'clock at the summer capital it was 8 p. m. at Spokane.

Golf, a luncheon and motoring, together with a few hours at official business, made up the President's first day of the last two weeks of the Beverly season.

The President will leave for Washington two weeks from today.

STROBEL TABLET GIFT TO HARVARD

A memorial tablet of cream white Vermont marble has been placed in Langdell hall, Harvard University, in recognition of the work of Edward Henry Strobel, formerly professor of international law and general adviser to his Siamese majesty's government.

The tablet is a gift to the college by the class of 1877, acting through a committee consisting of Morris Gray, A. Lawrence Lowell, Lindsay Swift, chairman, and John F. Tyler, secretary. The lettering is in gilt bronze, and the design is by Architect A. W. Longfellow of Boston.

DEMOCRATS IN MAINE SEEK EUGENE HALE'S SEAT IN THE SENATE

PORTLAND, Me.—Since the political overthrow in Maine the speculations on the probable successor to United States Senator Eugene Hale have taken a new turn.

While the Republican contest was on there were at least two candidates, Judge Frederick Powers of Houlton and former Gov. William T. Cobb of Rockland, with a possibility of other Republicans getting in the fray before the finish was reached.

Judge Powers had been in the race for a year or more, and it was his activity largely that forced Senator Hale to retire, as the latter saw considerable of a conflict ahead.

Congressman Edwin C. Burleigh of the third district, Col. Fred E. Boothby of this city, the Hon. Henry B. Cleaves, former Governor, and the Hon. Herbert M. Heath were mentioned as likely to get into the race. In view of a possible deadlock between Messrs. Powers and Cobb, it was hinted that, just before the election, plans were well in hand for Senator Hale to withdraw his resignation with the hope of reelection. But the result of the election put a quietus on everything Republican in Maine.

It has all along been supposed that the Hon. Charles F. Johnson of Waterville was slated for the Senate. As far back as the Democratic state convention, when it was first suggested that the candidate be outlined at that time, the name of Mr. Johnson was pretty much in the air as the most likely and practically the only candidate.

But since election other candidates have arisen notably the Hon. Obadiah Gardner of Rockland, who in 1908 was the Democratic candidate for Governor and made a splendid run. He was formerly at the head of the Maine state grange and in that position wielded much influence. He was induced to withdraw from a second nomination, and it has been quite generally understood that the withdrawal was for a purpose, that purpose being to secure something substantial in case the Democrats won.

WHAT EDITORS ARE SAYING

THE selected editorial comments today deal with the nomination of John A. Dix as the Democratic candidate for Governor of New York state, also with the Democratic platform by the convention:

NEW YORK HERALD—In short, the gathering at Rochester was a real convention. Its selection of candidates and its declaration of principles represent not the orders of the boss, but the will and the views of the vast majority of the assemblage, and therefore will strongly appeal not only to Democrats, but to independent voters who resent one-man domination.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE—John A. Dix of Washington county, the Democratic nominee for Governor, was fortunate in succeeding as chairman of the Democratic state committee Mr. Conners of Buffalo. He shines by contrast, and that is his title to his present nomination and his only title to election. Beside Mr. Conners he looks like a man who would reconcile some decent Democrats into giving up their confirmed habit of voting the Republican ticket. The contrast makes a very ordinary man seem, something more than ordinary.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) SUN—Careful consideration in the selection of the most suitable man for Governor prevailed throughout the Democratic convention at Rochester. The mode of proceeding from the very start evinced a prudence and deliberation in sharp contrast with mere cut-and-dried ratification of a slate dictated beforehand. From a field of 15 honored sons of New York, including foremost representatives of the bench, of civic affairs, and the press, John A. Dix, chairman of the state committee, was finally chosen as the candidate for Governor because of his straightforward stand for progressive principles, his clear-cut opposition to Taftism, his high executive ability, his personal popularity and his honorable business career.

NEW YORK WORLD—In John A. Dix the Democrats of New York have nominated a candidate for Governor who has proved that he has courage, conscience and convictions. The convention has given to the party one of the best Democratic platforms that has been framed in this state since the days of Samuel J. Tilden. It neither dodges nor evades. It meets the whole issue of Rooseveltism without flinching.

LAWRENCE (Mass.) TELEGRAM—The action of the New York Democrats in nominating the millionaire banker, John A. Dix, for Governor, is naturally very pleasing to Wall street. It is also very pleasing to the sugar trust and all its friends and sympathizers, for it gives them a chance to show their detestation of the Republican candidate, Mr. Stimson, who so vigorously and successfully prosecuted the sugar trust. Altogether the "interests" must think they did a very fine day's work at the Democratic convention.

BUFFALO COMMERCIAL—The Democratic state platform is more radical than it would have been had not National Chairman Mack made it his business to see that it included the popular "progressive" improvements of the day.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN—Mr. Dix represents the best element in the Democratic party of New York state, and his election as the successor of Mr. Conners as chairman of the Democratic state committee early last spring was a triumph for a new and more hopeful regime in that party's affairs. The platform of the New York Democrats is in some respects a triumph of political sagacity. In its strong declaration in favor of the federal income tax constitutional amendment, it puts the Republicans to shame.

NEW YORK TIMES—In a word, Mr. Dix is a Democrat. He adheres to the sound and long-tried principles of Democracy of which, if ever the nation had need in the direction of its affairs, it now has need. In his private career and in his public utterances he appears as the antithesis of all that is dangerous and subversive in Rooseveltism.

GENEVA (N. Y.) TIMES—After great reluctance the nomination was practically forced on John A. Dix, who accepted it only because Boss Murphy insisted. No matter how reputable a man Mr. Dix may be, the fact that he is under the domination of Tammany's boss will be sufficient to prejudice the voters against making him Governor.

ATLANTA (Ga.) CONSTITUTION—With prospects of victory fairly raining from every other section of the country, the dominance of Tammany Hall at the New York state Democratic convention is enough to send premonitory cold shivers down the Democratic spine the nation over.

POSTAL COMPANY PROTESTS RATES

NEW YORK—The Postal Telegraph Cable Company has complained to the public service commission of the second district of the charges exacted by the Western Union for business originating on Postal lines, and has asked for an order restraining the Western Union Telegraph Company "from discriminating against competitors" in the matter of rates.

SERENO E. PAYNE SPENT $1.50.
ALBANY, N. Y.—Representative Sereno E. Payne of Cayuga county filed today a statement of expenses incurred in connection with his renomination. He certified that he received no money in behalf of his renomination and that his expenses were $1.50 for printing notices of the convention which were sent to the delegates.

CHILDREN OPEN FAIR AT BROCKTON UPON FREE ENTRY FOR ALL

BROCKTON, Mass.—The Brockton fair opened today for four days' exhibitions. Last year the fair was visited in its four days by 157,557 persons, and the total receipts were $57,085. A larger attendance is expected this year.

Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, has been engaged to fly from the grounds every day in the Blériot monoplane with which he circled Boston light and won the Boston Globe's prize of $10,000. The Brockton Agricultural Society pays him $15,000 for his flying. This is the thirty-seventh annual fair of the society and even on Sunday, two days before the fair began, there were 18,000 persons on the grounds, just to see where the fair was going to be and take a look at the early arrivals.

This is children's day. There will be no attempt to keep schools in Brockton the rest of the week as children are admitted to the grounds free. There will be 20,000 of them. The horse show starts tomorrow and there are 531 entries in the 70 classes, including harness horses, saddlers, jumpers and polo ponies, owned by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Paul A. Sorg, Julian S. Norris of Virginia, Mrs. Adolph Ladenburg and others. The dairy exhibit is larger and better than ever before, in response to $4400 in premiums offered. The best pigs, sheep, cows and goats in New England and New York are on the grounds. Over in the poultry house one of the features this year will be the liberating of more than 1000 homing pigeons all at once to find their way home to various New England farms, the winners to receive prizes.

Sporting events will be numerous all four days. On Wednesday will be the marathon run from Boston, with the finish in front of the grandstand. Friday will be firemen's day with hand engine companies from far and near. It will also be Governors day, and Governor Draper of Massachusetts, Governor Weeks of Connecticut and Governor Quinby of New Hampshire will be present with staffs, and there will also be other prominent officials in attendance from New England states.

ASKS SHAW MONUMENT LIGHTS.
The lamp division of the street department has received instructions from the mayor's office to take steps to prepare adequate lighting for the Shaw monument on Beacon street, opposite the State House. The mayor would like groups of lamps placed on either side of the monument.

ADDRESS BY MR. COLEMAN.
George W. Coleman, president of the organization, spoke on the sociological conference in Sagamore at the meeting of the Pilgrim Publicity Association in the Boston City Club on Monday.

ANDOVER STATUE DEDICATED FOR SOLDIERS' MONUMENT

ANDOVER, Mass.—The statue recently added to the soldiers' monument at Spring Grove was dedicated this week with formal exercises, participated in by the Grand Army, the Sons of Veterans and the Woman's Relief Corps.

The veterans, escorted by Walter S. Raymond camp, Sons of Veterans, and headed by the Andover band, formed at the roadside and marched to the monument, where the opening remarks were made by President M. Bell Eastman of Woman's Relief Corps No. 127. The opening prayer was offered by Professor Ryder of Andover. During the unveiling of the statue by Miss Flossie Mears of Andover, "reveille" was sounded by a bugler. After this ceremony President Eastman of Woman's Relief Corps No. 127, formally presented the statue to Gen. William F. Bartlett, post No. 99, G. A. R., Andover. The gift was accepted by Commander George W. Chandler of the latter post in a brief patriotic address.

After the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by the band, E. Kendall Jenkins of Andover gave an historical sketch which was followed by remarks by J. Willard Brown, department commander of the G. A. R., and by Mrs. Florence Haynes, department president of the Woman's Relief Corps.

After another number by the band an address was delivered by the orator of the day, Alfred S. Stearns, principal of Phillips Academy. This was followed by remarks by Post Department Commander Peter F. Smith of Andover and John N. Cole. Then "America" was sung by the audience, led by the band, and the closing prayer offered by the Rev. Augustus Fuller of Ballardvale. The ceremonies were closed with the sounding of "taps" by a bugler and the veterans and Sons of Veterans retired in the same order as they came, headed by the band.

At the Railway Terminals

The Boston & Albany road's blue prints of the plans for electrification as far as Framingham, including the circuit, are completed and details ready for the report to be presented when called for by the commissioners.

The private car Mineola, occupied by August Belmont and party, arrived at North station at 8:30 o'clock this morning over the Boston & Maine's Portland division from Portland, Me.

Mr. J. O. Halliday, superintendent of transportation of the New Haven, at New Haven, is at his South station office to look after the eastern district's equipment.

The private car Elysian, occupied by T. N. Vail and party, arrived at North station this morning over the Boston & Maine's Southern division from Lyndonville, Vt.

The motive power department of the Boston & Maine has received 10 eight-wheel passenger engines from the eastern district of the New Haven road for service on suburban runs.

The Readville shops of the New Haven are painting and upholstering the interior of all platform copper cars for service on the Newport, Fall River and New Bedford runs.

CONTRACT IS LET FOR BUILDING NEW $760,000 FISH PIER

Commissioners Act Promptly When They Are Assured That Terms of Lease Are Satisfactory.

Immediately on receipt of information that all parties in interest had agreed to the terms of the lease under which the fish interests of Boston are to use the property of the commonwealth known as the Commonwealth docks, the board of harbor and land commissioners awarded the contract for the reconstruction of pier 6 at South Boston.

Bids were received by the commission on Sept. 2, but the award was withheld until it was determined whether the fish interests would accept the terms offered. This being assured, the board has awarded the contract to the Boston firm of Holbrook, Cabot & Rollins, they being the lowest bidders. Eleven bids were submitted as follows:

Holbrook, Cabot & Rollins, Boston	$760,000
William L. Miller, Boston	780,000
Roy H. Beattie, Inc., and John Cashman & Sons Co., Boston	797,000
Patrick McGovern, Boston	835,000
Metropolitan Contracting Co., Boston	855,000
Ryan-Parker Construction Co., New York	941,000
Thomas Flighbolls & Co., Beverly	960,000
Luke D. Mullen, Boston	1,100,000
Hugh Nawn Construction Co., Boston	1,300,000
P. J. Carlin Construction Co., New York	1,305,000
S. Pearson & Sons, Inc., New York	1,445,200

AUTOMOBILE IS SCORCHED.

An automobile belonging to A. L. Rausch of 16 Central street, East Boston, was badly damaged by fire early last evening while standing in front of the Rausch residence at 56 Saratoga street, East Boston. Children at play in the street caused the fire.

News of the Navy

Today's Naval Orders.

The following naval orders were posted today:

MILLION-DOLLAR STOCK INCREASE

NEW HAVEN—The capital stock of the Southern New England Telephone Company has been increased by $1,000,000 to provide for extensions planned and in process.

Stockholders of record Oct. 15 have the right to subscribe to the new stock at par in proportion of one share of new stock for each multiple of seven shares held by them at that date.

Subscriptions will be payable $50 a share Jan. 18, 1911, and $50 a share Oct. 18, 1911. Subscriptions for the new stock must be made before 4 p. m. Dec. 1 next.

Three new members were elected to the board, Judge W. F. Henney of Hartford; A. H. Bullard of Bridgeport and Charles E. Lyman of Middletown.

TUBE PRICES CHANGED.

PITTSBURGH—National Tube Co. has issued a new price list on wrought iron pipes as of Oct. 1, reducing the price on some sizes $2 to $4 a ton and advancing other sizes $2 a ton. The reductions, however, affect the larger tonnage. Independents are reported to be meeting the changes in prices.

OUTLOOK FOR FALL BANKING

CHICAGO—The National City Bank of Chicago, speaking of the fall banking situation in its October financial letter says:

"Total crop production is likely to reach an unusually high valuation. Railroads need funds, and some financing in the near future, if they are to handle coming business is urgent. Bank deposits are everywhere pretty actively employed in spite of undeniable falling off in general business which foreshadows an active money market during the balance of the year. We look for no sensational advance in rates, but a good healthy market. Europe holds the key. First eight months of 1910 showed import excess of $913,569 for first time since 1895. Same period of 1909 showed export excess of $59,482,000, and 1908 $391,000,000."

NEW STATE LINE TUNNEL STARTED

Work on the new state line tunnel on the Boston & Albany railroad has been started and is expected to be finished in about a year. The work will cost about $50,000. It is proposed to remove one of the two tracks through the present tunnel and place the remaining track in the center of the roadbed thereby securing what has long been desired—a proper clearance for the latest style of equipment. The new tunnel will, however, have two tracks, giving the Albany three tracks over nearly the entire length of its west section.

CONSIDERABLE ACTIVITY IN SHOE AND LEATHER MARKET

Foreign Trade Now Receiving Wide Attention Among American Manufacturers—Encouraging Reports Coming From the Sole Leather Dealers.

To interrogate merchants for the purpose of getting at the true condition of any particular branch of trade does not always result in obtaining a knowledge of the actuality of affairs pertaining to the business as a whole. The average shoe manufacturer is quite secretive, and while he appears to be willing to talk about the situation it is plainly discernible that he has left his interviewer a fund of information which might be distorted according to the frame of mind of his interviewer might be in. However, it is not difficult to form conclusions now to the truth of things, and it is safe to say the shoe factories are far from a shut-down.

Information from the sole leather market was both interesting and encouraging. Sales of hemlock sole leather showed the closing of several contracts running from 5000 to 10,000 sides each, and many others of a lesser amount. Buyers are conservative, which is a virtue to be commended, but the time has arrived when they must act and the above information shows that they have.

Receipts of hemlock leather are below normal, and warehouse stocks are being freely drawn upon. Again, we were told that union sole leather was changing owners in blocks of 10,000 to 20,000 backs, and lots of 1000, 3000 and 5000 were not so very unusual.

Oak leather is firm with sales regular, the factories demanding this tannage having contract dealings which make the trading in steady.

It was also noted that the demand for heavy side leather was active. Satin and kangaroo sides were meeting with a better sale than for weeks past, and it was said by a large dealer that an increase of sales might be obtained if the buyer could feel that the market would remain steady.

Those who specialize in calfskins report a marked improvement, the call for colors being beyond immediate supply. The curtailment of output by tanners in many cases beyond the ability of the tanner to satisfy, an advance in prices is rumored. Therefore, as speculation in leather futures is almost unknown among the shoe manufacturers, this activity in both the upper and sole leather markets must come from increased business at the factories, hence it is apparent that orders for shoes have reached this market the past 10 days large in number, or individually so.

The foreign trade is receiving wide attention, the general government assisting manufacturers in freely giving information in regard to the wants, customs and import duties of the different markets of the world, also instructing the entire consulate to gather data and facts of value to the American manufacturers, transmitting the same to all who may write them for the necessary information.

On Friday last James E. Dunning, American consul at Havre, delivered an interesting and highly instructive address on "How to Extend the Foreign Trade in Shoes and Leather," at the rooms of the New England Shoe and Leather Association.

Mr. Dunning is well posted in all details incident to the requirements of the foreign markets, proof of which was shown by the intelligent manner with which he answered the various questions put to him at the close of his address.

From him it was learned that the export trade in shoes amounted to a valuation of $12,000,000 during the last fiscal year, and that the export of leather for 1910 to date was nearly $8,000,000 in value, statistics showing a large increase over the business of 1909.

Caution is already noticeable among both wholesale and retail buyers when the subject of velvet shoes is brought forward, the feeling that they will be a one-season commodity being universal.

Warm shoes are having an excellent run, hurrying letters are at hand, frequently containing additional orders. A large maker of these goods stated that he was pushing his factory and that he expected the largest trade on his warm goods line that he had experienced for several years.

The compromise between the United Shoe Machinery Company and the Plant Company was a disappointment to many manufacturers, as they were in hopes that the validity of the much-discussed leases and the patents held by the defendant would be brought to a test.

This summer a larger number of retail buyers has been in this shoe market than ever before registered at the hotels, and their purchases have amounted to a large sum in the aggregate. Samples for 1911 are nearly completed, some lines being already in the showcases.

The stability of prices will be pleasing to the traveling men, as it makes their trip less irksome. Some expect to start on this trip about the twentieth of this month. Many have told the writer that they would not miss the Monitor's shoe buyers list if they could buy the paper in the different cities which they visit. They can, as it goes to every large city in this and foreign countries.

CENSUS GROWTH
BIG IN WATERLOO

WATERLOO, Ia.—Members of the commercial organizations of this city are congratulating themselves upon the fact that no other municipality in Iowa is able to show so large a percentage of growth, based upon this year's census reports. Waterloo has gained 14,113 inhabitants in the past decade, an increase of 112.2 per cent. The population is now 26,893.

The growth of Waterloo noticed in the past may be expected to continue at least in the same ratio, year by year. In 10 years, then, Waterloo should pass the 60,000 mark, say enthusiastic local citizens. But if extraordinary means be employed to bring in new residents, extraordinary growth in population may be expected.

Miniature Painting Old Art

"THE GIRL WITH THE BUTTERFLY NET."

Photograph from a miniature, exhibited in the Royal Academy, by Miss Alice Mott.

This branch of art is said to have originated with the monks in the fourth century. The word "miniature" was derived from "minium," a red pigment made by the monks for the illumination of manuscripts, and was used to designate the small pictures with which the monks used to further ornament the "head pieces." After some time small pictures were painted on ivory and these too were called miniatures.

Miniature painters flourished in the fourteenth century, and in France, under the patronage of Charles V., Charles VIII., and Louis XII. much beautiful work was done, most of it on ivory. At this time gold was mixed with the colors and often a gold background used. The French, Flemish, and Italians all produced good work as did also the English, whose miniatures were very clear and fine. Holbein's miniatures, of course, are famous, but they were executed on canvas, the word "miniature" then denoting any painting of small dimensions, whether on canvas or ivory.

There are two methods used in painting miniatures, wash and stipple; the latter is generally considered the best. In the former case the color is "washed" on; in the latter it is applied in minute spots and great care has to be exercised to make the whole present an even surface and show no signs of the stippling.

There are some exquisite examples of miniature painting in the Wallace collection. Cosway was a master of this art; he favored the stippling method. The Hall miniatures are fine examples of "wash" work. There, too, are Isabeau's charming miniatures of Josephine and Napoleon.

The miniature is especially interesting, as it has been the means of preserving to us portraits of many interesting people, and people who have loomed large in the world's history.

Queen Mary, who is herself a clever artist, has discovered and helped many young painters, and no doubt the miniature which was executed of Princess Mary and Prince George together on the occasion of their wedding, was the result of her interest in art.

Miniature painting is now chiefly done by women, and the Society of Miniature Painters of London has a long roll of members and owns as president the distinguished painter, Sir James Dromgole Linton, who is also president of the Royal Institute of Painters in Water Colors. His daughter, Miss Violet Linton, now Mrs. Cheater, is a clever miniature painter.

At the Royal Academy the number of these charming little paintings increases each year, and they elicit much admiration. The portraits of children are delightful, showing the dainty coloring one loves, and only seen, in children. King George's children have all been painted in miniature, both separately and in groups, by Miss Vere Temple, who also executed a portrait of the Duke of Teck, the father of Queen Mary.

It seems curious that a love for this delicate art should spring up in an age when impression is both taught and practiced. But, though the miniature has been much talked about and sought after during the past few years, it can scarcely be said one often comes across a real miniature, as understood and produced by the old masters. The advent of photography killed the miniature, and the fact of its producing a portrait so easily and inexpensively took great hold on the public and still continues to do so, for, generally speaking, the modern miniature, so-called, is almost always aided by photography, a portrait without life, without artistic merit, and entirely lacking in poetic feeling and grace.

There is, however, today, an artist who understands the requirements of a real miniature and is able to prove it by her work. She has rediscovered by great observation and strict adherence to the laws of beauty, of form and color, that which has been lost sight of for so long. She is entirely self-taught, unaided by any one or anything except occasional glimpses of the great masters' works. When asked who was her teacher she replies, "I had to teach myself as there was no one to teach me, but I studied very hard and made countless experiments." The greatest artists, both in England and abroad, have admired her courage and work, and have advised her to continue, saying she would make a name for herself in this branch of art. Today these words are verified; as the artist quotes, "Patience must have her perfect work."

Miss Alice Mott has painted many excellent portraits of beautiful women and children. The reproduction here shown of the girl with the butterfly net, although it gives but a poor idea of the original miniature, is a portrait, and gives a true idea of life and movement. When exhibited at the Royal Academy, London, it was given the place of honor, and a distinguished and well known Royal Academician, on congratulating the artist, said: "It is a real miniature, and the background is charming."

Miss Mott, in the early days of her art career, had the inestimable advantage of studying at Monsieur Chaplin's studio in Paris, where she worked from the living model in oils. When taking leave of this great artist he, recognizing her gift, honored her by asking her to perpetuate his name in England.

To miniatures, as to all other branches of painting, apply the words of William Hunt: "It is the way you look at a thing that makes the picture; it isn't the paint or the way the paint is put on." He also said, "Think all you can, put in as little handwork as possible and as much intelligence."

One would advise the collector of modern miniatures to go softly and observe the works of old masters; in this way he will by careful study gradually learn to distinguish good from bad or indifferent work. A good miniature is a good picture.

GREAT LAKES CITIES
ASKED TO AID IN THE HARBOR UPKEEP COST

TOLEDO, O.—This city may be deprived of part of the assistance formerly rendered by the national government in the maintenance and improvement of the harbor, according to the Times, which says:

With the increased cost of excavation and the marked advance in general upkeep, some measure providing for municipal maintenance of harbors may be adopted by the rivers and harbors committee of the House, vitally affecting Toledo and other cities upon the Great lakes.

Col. John Millis, government consulting engineer for this district, which includes, besides Toledo, Cleveland and Lorain, may embody such a recommendation in his report which will be forwarded to Washington shortly.

Some time ago the government entered into an agreement to deepen the channel in the local harbor to 23 feet, an operation entailing an expenditure of approximately $400,000. This included the harbor as far as the Fassett street bridge.

Colonel Millis has written H. I. Shepherd, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, asking to what extent the city would share this expense, giving as the reason for his question the fact that the present cost of the improvements would greatly exceed the estimate made some time ago.

While this system of municipal operation has not been installed to any great extent upon the Great lakes, Mr. Shepherd answered that he felt safe in assuming that Toledo would do as much toward the work as the other cities.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

A feature of the trading in local real estate Monday was the sale of the fine Back Bay estate at 38 Commonwealth avenue to the College Club, a women's organization. Harriet S. Allen et al. are the grantors. The club will use the new property to extend its present club rooms at 40 Commonwealth avenue.

By the new purchase the club will have as expensive quarters as the largest men's clubs in Boston, it is claimed. The club now includes practically every society woman in the city who is a college graduate.

When five years ago the club opened its home at 40 Commonwealth avenue, it was the first woman's college club in the country to own its headquarters. Its position on coveted territory gave it a prominence over all other women's societies.

The club has all the luxuries and conveniences that could be found in the best appointed men's clubs. Nearly $25,000 is spent each year for its maintenance. It has a membership of 750. The president is Mrs. Philip Wardner of Ashmont.

The property just purchased is assessed at $63,000 and comprises 4980 square feet of land and a five-story brick and stone building. The club's present quarters are valued at $53,300. The addition nearly triples the club's floor space.

Through the office of Codman & Street, Easton building, the transfer of the estate at 121 Pinecrest street, near Charles street, has been made from the Commonwealth Associates to Ellen V. Walsh. The taxed value is $5000, on a three-story brick house and 725 square feet of land. The rating is $2800 on the latter.

More than $17,000 in assessed valuation is represented in the sale just made of the property at 139 to 141 Endicott street, North End. There is a four-story brick building and a lot containing 2067 square feet of land, the latter taxed on $7200, Charles Rossetti transfers to Carolina de Stefano.

The interest of Maria P. Milano in two brick and two frame houses numbered 248 to 254 Commercial street, corner of and numbered 23 Henchman street, all rated at $8600, has been conveyed to Isabel Sunabhead. There is $5500 on the 1693 square feet of land.

DORCHESTER AND OTHER SALES.

Mary L. Plunkett has sold to Benjamin S. Gainsburg et al. the property 40 Harlem street, Dorchester. It consists of a frame house, occupying 4967 square feet of land, the latter taxed for $1200, and $6200 is the total assessment. The location is near the corner of Greenwood street.

A frame house with 2002 square feet of land, on Fowler street, near Glenway street, has been conveyed by Albert A. Ginsburg et al. to Harriet F. O'Connell. It is taxed for $5400, of which $900 is on the land.

Raymond P. Delano reports the sale of the house numbered 87 Sawyer ave-ue, Dorchester. The dwelling is a two-family one of 16 rooms, taxed for $8000, and there are 8000 feet of land, in one of the prettiest locations in Dorchester. Edna J. Towle conveys to Eugene F. McAuliffe, who buys for a home.

Joseph T. Lyons has sold to Elinor Patterson two of his new frame apartment houses on Elmrose street and Walnut avenue, Roxbury. One on Elmrose street occupies 4013 square feet and is taxed for $9600, of which $2600 is on the land. The other, on Walnut avenue, stands on 4479 square feet, assessed for $2700, with a total rating of $9200.

The four-story brick structure at 288 Dudley street, Roxbury, has been conveyed from Arthur I. Randall to Emma F. Adell. It is near Adams street and occupies 1656 square feet of land, with a total assessment of $9700. Of this sum $1700 is on the lot.

The frame house and 10,440 square feet of land at 63 Chestnut Hill avenue, Brighton, have been purchased by Mary E. Fiske. The title came from Albert Roeder. It is near Jackson avenue and taxed for $5200, of which $1700 is on the land.

HOTEL FOR SHEEP ISLAND.

DECIPHERED NAME
BY ALMANAC AID

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—A document bearing the attestation and signature of Lee A. Bergholz of New York, United States consul-general at Canton, China, and dated July 20, 1910, was filed in the Clark circuit court in this city.

The paper bears the seal of the official position held by Bergholz, but his name could not be deciphered. It was necessary to refer to an almanac before it was decided that Lee A. Bergholz had attached his autograph to certify that W. D. Shelby had signed the paper, which was the latter's final report as administrator of the estate of his father, the late John Shelby.

SOMERSET HOUSE AND ITS UNIQUE HISTORY

ALTHOUGH to Londoner and provincial alike, Somerset house is almost as familiar a name as the Bank or the Tower, yet all that the man in the street knows of it, and in a vague sort of way, is that it has something to do with revenue or taxation. But a history of Somerset house would throw much light on the history of England for a long period, and, too, in the building of today many a secret is as closely guarded as were the secrets of the old palace in the days of its regal splendor.

The first building dates from about 1546-7. When the boy, King Edward VI. had ascended the throne at the age of 10 his uncle, the Duke of Somerset, was appointed protector. Somerset lost no time in setting about his schemes of mad ambition. Today, we should call his method "by hook or crook," and no better illustration could be found than in the story of the palace built by and named after him. To obtain the site, he pulled down the old "Inns," as they were called, belonging to many of the bishops, as well as houses adjoining, and the Church of St. Mary. The stones for the building he obtained by pulling down the great cloister on the north side of St. Paul's and the Priory church of the Knights Hospitallers.

It is doubtful whether Somerset himself ever lived in the palace, for soon after it was commenced he was thrown into the tower, and though released later, he was executed in 1552. In this connection it is interesting to note that one of the many complaints against him was "his ambition and seeking of his own glory, as appeared by his building of most sumptuous and costly buildings and specially in the time of the King's wars and the King's soldiers unpaid."

The palace reverted to the crown, and among its occupants were Queen Elizabeth, Anne of Denmark, wife of James I., Henrietta Maria, wife of Charles I., and Catherine of Braganza, wife of Charles II. In course of time it became the residence of the Queens dowager and, ultimately, by an act passed in 1775, its demolition was decided upon and Buckingham house (in its turn succeeded by the palace of today) was settled on Queen Charlotte in lieu of Somerset house.

The old palace was at one time known as Somerset Place and later as Denmark house. The story of its change to the latter name reads somewhat quaintly today, for it was ordered to be so called by command of James I. in honor of his Queen (Anne of Denmark) to celebrate a more than usually satisfactory feast given to him by her there on Shrove Tuesday, 1616.

The new building was built from designs by Sir William Chambers. It was commenced in 1776, and about 10 years were spent in its construction. Architecturally it is of some fame. Kings College, which is really the east wing of Somerset house, was added later.

At one time offices of the admiralty were here, and Lord Nelson could be seen wending his way across the famous quadrangle. It is characteristic of the man that he is said to have always gone straight across the rough old cobbles instead of by the usual less direct path. The space vacated by the admiralty was fitted up for the storage of wills, which date back to 1483. Here can be seen the wills of Vandyck, Milton, Nelson, Wellington, Doctor Johnson, Newton and Shakespeare.

In the Strand front were housed for many years the Royal Society, the Society of Antiquaries and the Royal Academy of Arts. Here, too, for over 50 years, the exhibitions of the Royal Academy were held, and here Sir Joshua Reynolds delivered his famous discourses. Some of the rooms are very fine, and there are frescoes by Cipriani, who was responsible for the paintings on the royal state carriages. In the extensive vaults is many an interesting old tome. Records of England and Wales since July 1, 1837, are deposited here, and in addition records of events occurring on British ships, those recorded at all British consulates, in the army abroad, and many of British subjects furnished by foreign governments. Included in the many miscellaneous records are those kept by the Society of Friends (Quakers), and all other nonconformist bodies prior to 1837.

The other offices in Somerset house are mainly connected with the various branches of the inland revenue, probate, estate duty, etc.

And so, while the Somerset house of today has not the glamor of the fictitious romance of the old, it nevertheless has its interesting memories and associations, and, touching on every phase of the human life as it does, it is of interest to many of very different walks in life.

THE NOTE BOOK

Home from Squantum.

THE last of the bird-men had trundled his protesting pigeon into the hangar—at least one felt that the aeroplane would far rather be breasting the gale down toward Boston light than tucking its head under the canvas for the night, after Grahame-White wheeled round the pleasure with a sort of inclusive sweep to his unwearied audience. Then there was a quick diving for the outlet and a dividing of the crowds. Some went for the long lines of railroad vehicles, others whirled away in their own machines, still others turned sharply west for the ferry.

A new stone path had been laid over the soggy salt lands and piers with floats built on purpose to connect Squantum, the famous, with the well known Neponset bridge. A tall policeman opened his arms to receive the homing company at the entrance to the little pier. It was wiser to wait till the preceding boatload had been stowed away in the heavily chugging motor boat. Night came while the crowd, patient as all American crowds are, waited the return of their Charon. The moon came peering up over the still salt tide, high and dark by now.

Soon we were surging through the narrow gate where fares were to be paid, and a courteous stranger came to the rescue of the lingering lady, who searched her Boston bag with frantic fingers and meantime blocked the passage. He paid the fare for her as well as for his companion, and then every-body debouched on to the swaying float. "Don't all try to get on at once," agonized the captain, as the small motorboat came alongside and the float dipped under the scrambling crowd. "Place aux dames!" Not nowadays. Presently every possible inch of space was full and orders were given to move off, when a file of portly Boston policemen found standing room at the utmost edge. They were like a guard of foreign soldiers, one could fancy, in their gleaming buttons and martial helmets. And as we chugged slowly away toward the shore one recalled similar transits of days in Italy, where to travel all higgledy-piggledy was to be expected. The long lines of lights that mark the irregular contours of the waters at Neponset might be the Sorrento shore, and the land we had just left with a scramble the shore of Capri, where steamers cannot land but are connected by big boats into which every-body piles as he can. To be sure Vesuvius was not over yonder, nor were there the white piled rocks, but there was the same sense of beauty and moonlight and tender guardian stars, the same friendly unanimity among the crowds, the same—Ah, no! a stancher dependableness in the sturdy line of our guards than one ever feels beyond the protection of the stars and stripes.

Reaching the land-side pier, after we all stooped together in laughing exaggeration under the blackness of the low hung bridge, the people tumbled out as they could, the men helping some solitary woman traveler over the long step from the boat's edge, whence some obliging passenger had removed the side lights at the anxious adjuration of the man at the wheel. Then there was a rush down to the trolley cars and all aboard for Fields Corner and Dudley street, after which the orderly American ways of travel were resumed and one forgot to imagine that one was traveling in strange lands.

My Kate

She was not as pretty as women I know, And yet all your best made sunshine and snow Drop to shade, melt to naught, in the long trodden ways While she's still remembered on warm and cold days— My Kate.

Her air had a meaning, her movements a grace, You turned from the fairest to gaze on her face, And when you had once seen her forehead and mouth You saw as distinctly her soul and her truth— My Kate.

Such a blue inner light from her eyelids outbroke, You looked at her silence and fancied she spoke, When she did, so peculiar yet soft was the tone Though the loudest spoke also you heard her alone— My Kate.

She never found fault with you, never implied Your wrong by her right, and yet men at her side Grew nobler, girls purer, as through the whole town The children were gladder that pulled at her gown— My Kate.

None knelt at her feet, confessed lovers in thrall, They knelt more to God than they used, that was all; If you praised her as charming, some asked what you meant, But the charm of her presence was felt when she went— My Kate.

—Mrs. Browning.

Judging the People

"I ought to go home tonight, but I'm going to stay over until tomorrow so that I can go to the market place," a visitor to our city said to me recently, says a writer in the Chicago Journal. "The market place! What possible interest can you have in that?" I queried in wonder. He is a professor of English literature.

"That's my way of seeing a new city," he explained. "I think the right way to see the people of any city is to go to three places—their market places, their theaters and their churches. There you see three big phases of their life—what they eat, how they amuse themselves and how they worship."

"Be Sure You Are Right"

Sir Herbert Tree, in the discussion by the journalists' conference on dramatic criticism, said:

"I may tell you of a little experience I have had since the opening of this congress. I find that a distinguished novelist who has taken to dramatic criticism wrote a very elaborate condemnation of a production which has been lately given—whose name wild horses should not drag from me. He said that in this production the urns and the goblets and the cups were obviously wrought for this special occasion in solid and real silver. He enlarged upon this, and spoke of the bombastic vulgarity of the manager and the general unworthiness of the conception. Well, had it been true that these were wrought of solid and real silver then he would have been a mere reporter. But he was an imaginative writer, because upon these premises of the imagination he went on in the most brilliant and eloquent manner to attack the production. Well, why not? Now, nothing can be more vulgar than for the manager to put forth that he spends so much money on a production. If this were true, as I say, it would be mere reporting, but, in point of fact, those goblets and those urns and cups were made of papier-mache."

Your real influence is measured by your treatment of yourself.—Alcott.

The Cockney's Lilac Bush

Of course, you may talk about the chestnuts in bloom at Bushey. A tree with a park to grow in, and with its roots a hundred years in good red earth, ought to show white when blossoming-time comes round. But you should see the little bit of lilac blowing its splendid purple in my garden. A bit of a cockney garden, mine is, and the ground is so poor that things you put down have not the heart to come up.

But my garden has its lilac tree, and, no matter what I put down which does not come up, and no matter what I cut down in the shape of weed when it does come up, the lilac blooms triumphantly, and for a week the tree nods with a purple pride. I wonder, if the lilac looks so fair in a spot which is not overwhelmed with beauty, whether in the home of lilac it looks even fairer still? They tell me of an open country, where you cannot see house-tops, where there are avenues of lilac bloom and the fresh smell of earth is leavened with its scent. And I wonder whether one would be better there—or worse. It must be quaint to live without a horizon of house-tops; to come in from the still night, leaving trees whispering as they softly rub their leaves together; to waken to the clear call of a strange piping songster, and to gaze, through a latticed window, not at one modest handful of dusty lilac, but at a purple forest greeting the eastern sun.

But, of course, a little lilac may make some people very happy, where a lot would only bore them.—London Leader.

Setting Him Right

He was a rather small boy—which makes what the New York Times relates concerning him all the more amusing.

The minister, in one of his parochial visits, met the boy and asked what o'clock it was.

"About 12, Mr. Bent," replied he.

"Really! I thought it had been more."

"It's never any more here; it just begins at 1 again."

In certain districts of Florida excellent highways are made by covering sandy roads once a year with the leaves of the long-leaved pine.—Exchange.

A PEN PORTRAIT

A REMARKABLE description of a human countenance is given by a writer in the Westminster Gazette, who says:

Mr. Meredith's portraits (I had well-nigh written the word in the singular for the one man, every aspect of whose face we all wished to know, was the one man who most set his face against letting his be known to us) give no idea of his personality. They are likenesses, it is true. The noble shaping and carriage of the head, the commanding presence, the stern beauty of the features, the touch of hauteur and even of what I may paradoxically call "gentle severity," are all to be seen in his portraits. But compared with Meredith's self, the best of his portraits was but a beautiful mask.

It was a perfect summer day, a day not of blinding, blazing, intolerable glare, but of alternate cloud and shine; a day of swiftly changing atmospheric effects, when cloud-squads were surprised by the ambushing sun, and when the sun, in turn, was put to flight by

The Bible and Science and Health

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE teaching is clearly set forth in its textbooks, "The Bible and Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," the latter being in the nature of a commentary upon the former. The first questions concerning Christian Science which naturally arise in the thought of the seeker are in regard to its teachings as to the nature of God. The statement that God is omnipotent, omnipresent and omniscient usually finds a ready acceptance, so ready in fact as often to show but little real thought on the subject, for when the logical conclusions are drawn from these premises objections frequently follow. Thus, if God, who is Love and Truth, is all-powerful, hatred and falsehood have no power; if God, who is Life and Spirit, is all-presence, there is no room for death and matter; if God, who is all good and all wise, knows all, evil and ignorance are necessarily nothing, for they can find no place in the infinite intelligence. These facts—that evil is not power, that matter is not real, that God knows not sin, sickness and death—should not seem hard to grasp, inasmuch as reason tells us that they are true and Bible history furnishes many proofs of their verity.

Elijah's demonstration with the barrel of meal which wasted not, and the cruse of oil which failed not, Jesus' supplying the needs of the multitude with the five loaves and two fishes, and Peter's experience in the prison when the bonds fell from him and the doors opened before him, are only a few of the many instances recorded which show the ability of those who pray aright to demonstrate the nothingness of matter in the light of spiritual understanding.

Nor need the statement that God knows not sin prove a stumbling block to those who would believe. We read in Genesis that God saw everything that He had made and pronounced it good. Surely then He could not have created or been conscious of an evil material universe. When David's spiritual understanding was awakened he was no longer conscious of evil. He saw the earth "full of the goodness of God." John on the island of Patmos had a vision of the real heaven and earth, but he saw no evil therein. God is "of purer eyes than to behold . . . iniquity," the Bible tells us, and as men realize more their likeness to God they, too, begin to lose the consciousness of evil.

Another question concerning Christian Science which naturally presents itself to the seeker for truth is in regard to the nature of man. Christian Science declares that the real man is a spiritual being and cannot suffer from material conditions. It makes a distinction, however, between the evil mortal counterfeit and the man of God's creating. It shows that in order to bring the real to light we must deny this material selfhood and declare the reality of the spiritual man. "How does this bear out the Bible teaching?" the skeptic asks. We read in the Scriptures that God made man in His image and likeness to have dominion over all the earth. God is Spirit, therefore His image and likeness must be spiritual, and this is the real man which Christian Science teaches us exists where our eyes, blinded by materiality, see the counterfeit. True it is that the Bible admits the seeming existence of the counterfeit man. Job declares that "man that is born of a woman is of few days, and full of trouble," but as evidence that he sees the unreal transitory nature of this mortal man he adds, "He fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not." As to the mental effort required of Christian Scientists, in making denial of material selfhood and in affirming the avivified likeness, is it not exactly paralleled in Paul's advice to the Ephesians: "That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness."

The point where Christian Science probably differs most widely from the regularly accepted religious beliefs is in its teachings regarding the unreality of sin, sickness and death. Does the Bible corroborate these statements? Christian Scientists think that it does. Jesus spoke of the devil as a liar and the father of lies and everywhere in the Scriptures we find references to the "deceitfulness of sin." There certainly is no reality in a lie. It needs only to be denied and replaced with the truth and it vanishes into its native nothingness. Sickness and suffering are plainly the result of sin and when sin is overcome, sickness, too, will cease to claim a place in our experience. This is proved in every case of Christian Science healing. And what shall we say of death? Could anything real be destroyed? Yet the Bible speaks of death as the last enemy that shall be destroyed.

There is no teaching of Christian Science which does not find ample corroboration in the Scriptures. And more than this, the book Science and Health so illuminates the Bible teachings and so clearly reveals their practical import that it proves to be a veritable "Key to the Scriptures" which unlocks their treasures of health and peace for weary and sin-sick humanity.

Word Gramophone Not Patented

A curious case, in which it was sought to establish a monopoly in the use of the word "Gramophone," was decided recently in the chancery court. The Gramophone Company applied to have the word registered to denote talking machines and accessories manufactured by them. Thereupon Mr. Justice Parker traced the history of the word from the time the first talking machine, called a phonograph, was invented by Edison in 1878. The word "gramophone" was first used by Berliner, the inventor of a "disc" talking machine, although there was some evidence that the word was in existence before that. The Gramophone Company had taken over the Berliner patents, and had sought to secure a monopoly of the word "gramophone" by extensively advertising their talking machines, also by issuing warning circulars to members of the trade stating that any interference with their monopoly rights to the word would be followed by legal proceedings.

The judge said he was convinced that the risk of expensive litigation with a wealthy company had been no small inducement to dealers to acquiesce in the rights thus insisted upon. No one, however, had the right to monopolize the word "gramophone," as applied to talking machines, any more than any one had the right to attempt to monopolize the word "matches." The application to register the word therefore ought not to be allowed, and he accordingly dismissed it with costs.—London Daily Graphic.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT

Chameleons of the Sea

Children in New York city must be very glad to visit the Aquarium, and they must linger long at the tanks where the "chameleons of the deep," as a writer in the Century magazine calls them, are seen. These are fish that constantly change color, not like the real chameleon, according to the color near it—a way of disguising its presence from any foe—for these fish change their color entirely without regard to their surroundings, though of course the rocks or the white sand make a difference in the effect of their colors. There is one fish called the common pig fish which has four costumes that it may put off or on in a few minutes, like any harlequin or clown of the circus.

Then there is a fish, called the red mouthed grunt—not a pretty name to be sure—which has usually a pale golden yellow color with silver stripes. When these fish are disturbed in any way they sink to the bottom of the tank and become suddenly of a dark mottled appearance, so dark that the fish seems to be an entirely different species.

The blue tang is one of the most interesting of these changeable creatures. Its normal color is a creamy white, but it is rarely seen in this dress, since at the approach of a visitor it changes at once to a bright blue. It is not possible to photograph it in its light garb, for all attempts have thus far produced only the intensely blue fish.

But the red parrot fish is the most interesting. It is sometimes a brilliant, conspicuous red on the under surface and lower fins. The color comes like sudden blush. The pale pink of the tail turns crimson red and its paler bands become white, giving a most gay appearance, in red with white bands. In its palest state the fish is almost colorless and without markings.

Invention and Mechanics

EVERY agency for progress is built on inventiveness. Talent and theory lend themselves to practical application since the step ahead comes as the natural outgrowth of things already accomplished. The sign posts at the crossways of discovery and invention point in many directions. Mechanical art is a persistent effort to come out of darkness into the light, and the centuries have here witnessed an evolution which in its fullest meaning is in agreement with everything that spells knowledge and better living.

Exhibitions, whether international or local in their aspect, are the means of carrying forward the idealism of the nations. World's fairs cement racial friendships into still closer bonds; they afford vistas unobtainable in any other manner; the interests of both exhibitors and visitors are furthered where countries meet beneath a common roof. Hardly less important to the world exhibit is the similar affair as conducted in the large city. To make clear such affirmation it is only necessary to point to the Boston Mechanics Exposition, now again demonstrating its attractiveness to the public.

It would require a cataloguing of about every invention and mechanical device to make specific what this mechanics' fair has in view. New England manufacturers, as well as manufacturers throughout the country, have reason to know that as a stimulating factor in the domain of constructive business the exhibition has warranted itself. The public need hardly be told what it can expect with each recurring season. If the displays are good in any given year, progress and invention make certain that with each twelvemonth there will be more interesting features. There is enough lighter entertainment to relieve the technical and mechanical features. Music of a high order is provided. Democracy is the keynote of the exhibition, and the closing day usually finds the public no less interested than when the doors were opened.

That electricity plays a foremost part in the exhibition is a matter of course. Hundreds of prospective Edisons will have an opportunity to see what marvelous additions the pioneer is still making to his stock of inventions. Manufacturers of shoes, naturally, expect that footwear making is given a special chance in the home of the industry. There is no disappointment in that respect. The trade schools are furnishing exhibits of their handicraft.

The art of printing is little known outside of the press room or of the newspaper plant, and visitors to the fair should not fail to acquaint themselves with what here is presented. Despatch, newness and neatness in appearance are three qualities required of the modern paper. No factor for the upbuilding of humankind has a greater opportunity. Clean journalism does not mean a journalism void of interest. The world is large and man is active. Invention spurs him on, and when genius makes its entrance here and there the newspaper is quick to give it recognition.

Like Boston, in the present instance, many other cities in the United States hold their industrial and mechanical exhibitions at this time of the year. Efforts are especially directed toward attracting the younger element. The inventions of the future must come as a result of the knowledge gained by the generation of the present. The schoolroom is the cradle for high ideals, carried into service. In the construction of a building, the studying of the stars, the writing of books that count, or in any other activity, man must resort to means that lie deep down within him. Expositions are the outward evidence of what man is capable of doing. Every avenue of activity is open and all profit when one marks new progress.

Greater Economy; Better Service

reform might be taken it was quite indifferent as to when they should be taken and as to who should take them. The popular impression with regard to governmental extravagances has been so vague that it has been a serious question in the minds of office holders desirous of stopping leaks whether efforts toward economy would not eventually win blame rather than praise.

Not to go too far back, it will be recalled that little if any attention was paid to William Howard Taft's declarations for a more economical and businesslike system of national administration during his campaign for the presidency. It will be recalled, too, and easily, how little attention was paid to his utterances on the question of retrenchment during his western tour in the fall of 1909. There is hardly a doubt but that he lost friends for himself personally and for his administration in general because of his opposition to certain western projects which involved a call for immense appropriations. Although the country had rung year after year with condemnation of the rivers and harbors bill, there was lacking a sufficient popular sentiment last summer to justify the President in vetoing what he recognized to be, and what all Washington knew to be, a "pork barrel" measure. He signed this bill, but under protest and with the notification that it would be the last of the kind to which he would give his approval.

Since then there has been a noticeable change of sentiment with regard to the necessity of checking the tendency toward extravagant government expenditures. Even among his progressive opponents the defeat of Mr. Tawney of Minnesota has been regretted openly because of the firm stand he has always taken in preventing raids upon the treasury. The fact that during his long service in Congress Joseph G. Cannon has been a "treasury watchdog" has of late done much to soften the criticisms of his political enemies. There is, in short, a manifest growth in the demand for greater economy and greater efficiency at Washington, and for the first time the public appears to be taking a real interest in the subject.

Of course, if indications in this regard are not deceptive, this change in public sentiment must be followed, and speedily, by beneficent results. The feeling in the present Congress is strongly in favor of economy, but so long as the public was apparently indifferent, congressmen held off from the advocacy or support of measures of retrenchment believing that they might offend rather than please their constituents by undertaking to overturn the old and generous and extravagant system of doing business. It is now becoming plainly evident in many quarters that they need no longer entertain this view. The next Congress, indeed, is almost certain to be composed of men who will have learned, among many other things, that popular toleration has been withdrawn from methods that make for waste and incompetence.

MAYOR GAYNOR resumes office with the same lack of ostentation that has marked his public career from the first.

THE simple announcement from London that two destroyers are on their way to Australia to form a nucleus of a new commonwealth navy reminds us that the greatest modern chapter in British history has only just opened. A growing sense in the dominions of the solidarity of empire, an increasing understanding of the importance of the whole—and of the center—to the parts, and the vigor of manhood only needed the stimulus of an appeal from the mother land to flower into action. British apprehension regarding foreign naval growth brought unasked the gift of a dreadnought from New Zealand, the offer of a similar battleship from Australia, and action by loyal Canada. The result was a naval conference toward the end of 1909 that accepted the offer of New Zealand and made possible Canadian and Australian navies.

While the two torpedo boat destroyers now mentioned, and a third which is to be sent out in sections and fitted up in Australia, really belong to the days before the conference, they have become part of an accepted responsibility whereby the young commonwealth assumes a part in world politics. With an immense coast line, a floating trade amounting to $800,000,000 per year, and about 4,400,000 people, Australia has determined to begin its naval defense with an indomitable, or dreadnought-cruiser, three cruisers of the Bristol type, six destroyers and three submarines, apart from a naval college. Tenders were invited for the great warship in the beginning of this year. The Bristol will be remembered as the cruiser that has just attained a speed of 27 knots an hour—the fastest rate ever attained by a British cruiser—so the "Lion Cub" has made a seemingly good choice.

Typical of the manhood spirit is the fact that Australia's navy will be manned as far as possible by Australians. It will be kept in Australian waters, controlled by the commonwealth government, and in practically every way will be an independent naval force in time of peace. In time of crisis, or of hostility, the fleet becomes an empire asset, just as the future compulsorily trained citizens of the island continent will be ready to fall in line with other citizens elsewhere if necessary. The Monitor has recognized that an imperial senate, which will really be a governing council for the British empire, is distinctly within vision, and a short study of the facts behind those two destroyers now on the ocean will prove the correctness of our viewpoint.

Australians have taken a pride in naval training for many years, and even sent a naval force to China on a memorable occasion. Over 3000 trained men are ready to man their own navy, and if men are needed at any time there are thousands of yachtsmen and fishermen who would make a splendid force. But it should be pointed out that aggrandizement and militarism are entirely foreign to the ideals of the commonwealth and of its people. The new navy marks neither the one nor the other. Rather it marks the alert readiness of the island-continent in the cause of world peace.

THE meeting of Booker T. Washington and King Frederick at Copenhagen brought together two great race leaders and furnished the world a valuable lesson that is easily discerned.

The Hoe Collection Sale

IT APPEARS that a question as to whether the Robert Hoe art collection could be disposed of more advantageously in the United States than abroad was one of the important points raised among the executors of the estate. If the library be included, and it should be, for the books are made more valuable by reason of the character of the bindings, the collection represents an investment of about $4,500,000, almost equally divided between works of art and books. The sale, therefore, promises to be an extraordinary one, and it is hardly to be wondered at that the point referred to should have been raised and should have caused some concern. The sum of $4,500,000 although great is not one calculated to overwhelm American art and book collectors, even if it were possible that the auction prices would reach those originally paid; but when it came to the sale of millions of dollars worth of pictures and marbles and bronzes and bindings at home, the question to be debated and decided was whether such a sale could be as successfully carried on in the United States as, for instance, in England or France. This point must be left over for later settlement, despite the fact that there have recently been some great art sales in New York. The interesting thing at present is that the executors are of the opinion that the sale may be prosecuted as satisfactorily in New York as anywhere. The decision may have little interest for London or Paris, where great art sales are of constant occurrence, but it is one that may have great meaning for New York and for America, where sales of this magnitude, to say the least, are not common.

If the sale should be successful it will mean that American buyers are abandoning the false notion that the value of meritorious art works may be raised or lowered by reason of the place of purchase. So long as this idea prevails it cannot truthfully be said that art is loved and valued purely for its own sake in this country. Surely a painting, a piece of sculpture or something in bronze or binding, cannot be made better or worse by reason of its sale in London, Paris, New York or Hongkong. There has never been a question regarding the ability of Americans to purchase the Hoe collection or any other like it. The question has been one entirely of their disposition, and this has been partly disposed of already. That it will be wholly disposed of soon there is hardly room for a doubt.

CANADA'S prospective $10,000,000 powder merger, we trust, is something that can properly be touched off all together.

An Age of Publicity

IN ITS present-day application the word publicity has earned for itself a place of high honor in the English language. The meaning of the word, of course, at no time has been in doubt. Publicity spoke as plainly to the age that produced its Shakespeare as to the twentieth century. Since English speech became a dominant force the light of publicity has been ready to serve any who cared to kindle it. Republics have been reared where public knowledge of affairs of state placed the corner stone. But for the desire to know, the school systems of the present might have lacked the true incentive. Industry and commerce have learned the value of keeping the public informed.

The most modern phase of publicity as such is the apparent willingness of great corporations and municipalities to let down the bars and afford the public some measure of opportunity to look around within those figurative enclosures where not long ago stood the sign of "No trespassing." Politics or business are, perhaps, two of the most important matters with which the average citizen concerns himself. Agriculturist and city worker are alike an issue and it is their right and duty to be conversant with what is going on. The federal authorities, as much so as the least among the office holders in the village, are accountable to the public directly affected.

The publicity of 1910 is as different from that of a hundred years ago as the airship is different from the fast locomotive. The cry has ever been for more and more knowledge of what is taking place behind the scenes. The United States led for a time where national or civic matters were concerned. Then came a period when unbounded prosperity placed public participation in the rear. It needs no recital here of what were the means required to force publicity into its own. Sufficient that the shutters were removed, letting in the sun and light, and with the further result of purifying the atmosphere. Most interesting of all, where formerly a certain amount of secrecy was considered an asset, business interests have discovered that it is vital that the public be informed.

Although inquisitorial methods were needed in many instances to work this change it must not be inferred that without such action publicity would not have reached its present dimensions. The hour evidently demanded it and the legal measures were means toward that end. It is a patent fact that corporate interests are continuing their publicity campaigns with vigor. In some cases they go the law one better in making public statements that could not properly be demanded of them. Moreover, railroads and other transportation companies are now in a position where they can speak pleasantly of their achievements. Improvements and plans ahead are now as familiar to the reading public as to the corporations. Of course, competition is still a restraining influence against opening every ledger and showing every entry. But in a general way the secrecy is no longer there, and men and methods are more clearly defined.

To the manufacturer and the merchant who have their public to deal with, the publicity that centers around the modern advertisement is a measure for mutual protection. Seller and consumer now realize that behind an announcement must stand quality. The business man's word is his real stock in trade. Public confidence is equivalent to bank deposits. The big or little establishment does business for more than the passing moment.

With all the varied scope and form of publicity, the gain to the present generation has been great. Men have come to learn that it pays to be in the open.

It is strange that some enterprising American newspaper's advertising representative in Europe doesn't tell the Kaiser about the easiest way to dispose of that castle he wants to sell.

PROGRESS in methods of education is a never-ending marvel, and one of its latest and most admirable developments is the evening school. In recent years the classes of modest size and attainments that inaugurated this auxiliary movement have given place to larger and more pretentious organizations whose worth finds expression ultimately in diplomas accepted by prominent schools of learning. Thus the youth whose activities in daylight are confined to toil finds when darkness falls the means of his advancement. By contact with such influences even boys in discouraging environment feel their hopes stirred by new incentives, their desires molded along lines that will be surely helpful. Boys, youths and men of nearly all great countries are experiencing the pleasant effects of this idea conceived and applied to meet a demand that had grown powerfully insistent.

In America the night school has been a permanent institution for years, and its results are seen and noted in practically every walk of business or social life. Many a valuable man would have failed to reach his present high office without the assistance given him through instruction in the night school. Others there found inspiration for higher callings than what environment had promised. The boy whose earnings must go toward a family's support is offered a splendid opportunity to acquire in the evening that which work at other times precludes. The Y. M. C. A., private societies, public schools in some cities, individual teachers and even colleges are engaged in this grand work of training minds after sunset. Courses in law, mathematics, engineering and practically every other leading study are available at comparatively small expense, which in many instances is nominal. Government employees at Washington, for instance, attend the night schools in large numbers, seeking information that will enable them to secure better positions.

Never before has it been so easy for a person to gain an education. Facilities for learning are discovered everywhere. The town library, the public school, the preparatory institutions and the university all are links in one great purpose. Now the night school is acquiring the same vast importance. The educational achievement, remarkable half a century ago, is surpassed constantly at present. Improved facilities for conveyance, even from isolated communities, and higher standards combined with more numerous opportunities for learning are convincing evidences that there is hardly any legitimate excuse for the failure to secure a good education. With the progress of the night school there is more reason than ever why ignorance should be effaced by uncovering the knowledge that means so much to the individual, the state and the nation.

THE Chinese Senate—forerunner of a general Parliament—in itself constitutes a prophecy of advancement that may equal what Japan has done since Commodore Perry's memorable visit.
